The Queen's Bad Deal

By Arthur Brisbane

MR. NEIL PETREE, newly-elected president of James McCreery & Co. in New York, gave a luncheon yesterday to celebrate completion of the gigantic Empire State Building, a magnificent shaft, trimmed with shining metal, 1248 feet high, tallest structure on earth. The great newspaper men were there, all three of them, Louis Wiley, Roy Howard and Mr. Dewart.

Remarks by former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, guest of honor, head of the Empire State Building enterprise, should persuade the wise to buy and keep good real estate. The Empire State Building, occupying less than one acre, stands on part of the Thompson farm of 20 acres, bought in 1799 for $2500. The part of an acre on which the magnificent building stands is worth more than $10,000,000. The 20-acre farm would be worth about $200,000,000.

Land does improve in value and real estate opportunities are as good today as when Thompson bought his farm, and better.

The French government, to promote its pari mutuel system of race track betting, arranges to take bets not only at the race course, but anywhere in France. Bets can be sent by telegraph or mail. You deposit money in advance, not less than 5000 francs ($200). And the smallest bet by wire or mail is fifty francs ($2).

In this country we bet on the races at least ten dollars for every one bet in France and all the profit goes to bookmakers, race track touts, etc. Similarly, in our liquor selling, all the profit goes to bootleggers, racketeers, hijackers and speakeasies.

It used to pay a big profit, with less crime, to the government, as it still pays a great profit with little crime to governments of France, Germany, England and other civilized countries.

Business men plan a fight to change, in a common sense way, some of the laws that hamper business, and it is none too soon.

Under the obsolete Sherman Act, made in the days of Hansom cabs, nearly half a century ago, any group of men that should now "conspire" to stop criminal waste in the oil industry, or to regulate any industrial production to prevent slumps or depression, could be put in jail.

In Europe great combinations are encouraged, entire nations go into them. Here we say to business men:

"No, you can't make any agreements. You must compete with each other, no matter how disastrously, no matter to what extent you waste or exhaust the nation's resources.

"You can't make any agreement to prevent producing ten times as much as the people can buy. You must continue forever to run your industries on a haphazard, wastefully, competitive basis."

That nonsense should stop.

G. J. Starkey, lawyer of Hollywood and accustomed to big figures, says Queen Isabella got a poor return when she invested $6000 worth of jewelry in Columbus' trip to America.

If she then had invested $6000 at five per cent. compounded twice a year, it would amount now to four trillion, five hundred billion dollars ($4,500,000,000,000) and that, says Mr. Starkey, is "eleven and one-half times the value of the United States and all its possessions." The figures are impressive, but anyone who would sell the United States now for four and one-half trillions would make a bad bargain.

We have our billionaires, seven of them, and we shall, in due time, have our "trillionaires," if men persist in their foolish pursuit of more money than they need.

Mary Pickford, in New York on her way to London, says her will will compel the burning of all films of moving pictures in which she has appeared.

Miss Pickford is still very young, her wife prophesies, will not be read for 60 or 70 years at the earliest, and everybody hopes she will be seen for 100 years. Perhaps, in that interval, she will realize that to destroy pictures which are a most important part of a great American industry, and illustrate a forward step in civilization, would be a crime.

She made her pictures, she says, to give happiness in her lifetime. She should leave them to give inspiration and information.

ROBERTS GIRL HUNTED IN BOSTON

Dying Gangster's Sweetheart Believed by Police to Be Hiding Here

Marion Roberts, red-haired Boston showgirl, eluded a New York police search early today and this afternoon was being sought here for questioning in the shooting of Jack ("Legs") Diamond, racketeer.

The Boston showgirl fled from Diamond's side in N. Y. stronghold shortly after she was named by Atty.-Gen. Bennett as the "key" to the mystery surrounding two recent attempts on Diamond's life, the last of which will probably be successful.

While New York state police, patrolling every highway in Greene county, stopped automobiles and searched for the red-headed chorus, Miss Roberts was said to be in hiding with friends in Jamaica Plain.

PLACED ON GRILL

The showgirl was named by the New York attorney-general's investigator as holding the key not only to the shooting of Diamond near Catskill early this week but to the attempt on his life at the Hotel Monticello in New York last October.

She had breakfasted with Diamond at the hotel a few minutes before the first shooting.

In the subsequent investigation she was questioned many times, telling conflicting stories, and was under bonds as a witness.

LION ATTACKS CHILD OF 6 IN SCHOOL

Ohio Pupil Near Death as Result of Clawing; Owner of Beast Sought

Cincinnati, O., April 30 (INS)—Sprung upon and attacked by a mountain lion, which had been brought into a schoolroom for exhibition purposes, six-year-old Vivian Leischner, a pupil at the school, was injured, perhaps fatally, today.

The beast, which was being [illegible] in a room at Madeira school at Price Hall.

The child, looking for the washroom, started to enter the room. A scream from the teacher and pupils checked the animal. A woman, who was with them, invited the girl to enter, saying they're harmless.

As the child entered, the lion, without a warning growl, pounced down and attacked the girl.

At Emergency Hospital, where the child was rushed following the attack, it was reported Vivian was suffering from a fractured skull. Attaches at the institution held little hope for her recovery.

The animal, it was said, had been taken to the school by a man named William Harwood, owner of a private menagerie near Palo Alto, Cal. Harwood, school authorities stated, had permission to lecture and make the animals perform.

Immediately following the attack, the lecturer and his woman companion loaded the animals on a truck and departed. Police ordered a search for the pair.

BOY HERO BREAKFASTS WITH HOOVER; SEES HIM AT PLAY

YOUTH VISITS SHRINES AT ARLINGTON

The 13-year-old Colorado school boy, guest of President Hoover because of heroism in a school bus tragedy during the March blizzard, left the White House early in a big presidential automobile.

He was accompanied by Mrs. Stark McMullin, a friend of Mr. and Mrs. Hoover often at the White House. Together they rode around the speedway jutting into the Potomac.

AT HISTORIC SPOTS

Cherry blossoms still are in full bloom there. Visits also were made to Arlington National Cemetery and the tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

The boy was particularly interested in the monument to those killed when the Maine was sunk, and asked to see the grave of Floyd Bennett, who flew the plane in which Admiral Byrd crossed the North Pole.

At the Fort Myer, Virginia, stable, Bryan saw where the fine horses ridden by the Presidential bodyguard are kept.

He was up early enough to have breakfast with the President and to see the latter play medicine ball on the South lawn. Later, he visited the kennels to see the various and sundry dogs which have been presented to President and Mrs. Hoover.

SEES HOOVER DOGS

The Norwegian Elkhound, almost as big as a pony, was regarded by the boy as the "greatest dog in the lot."

Before starting on his sight-seeing trip, Bryan produced an old-fashioned mouth organ for the amusement of Peggy Ann Hoover, aged 8, granddaughter of the President.

On it he began to play many of the old tunes of the West, including "Lone Cowboy" and others. President and Mrs. Hoover heard the music and came into the room. The boy played for nearly a half hour before exhausting his repertoire.

Afternoon plans included a trip to Mt. Vernon and a stop in Alexandria to visit Christ Church where George Washington worshipped.

President Hoover has asked the boy to extend his stay.

So impressed was the President with the bearing of the boy he invited here to spend a day and night because of his heroism when left in charge of a snowbound Colorado bus, that he let it be known he wanted Bryan to remain in Washington until he had seen all a 13-year-old could see.

SAW ROYAL RECEPTION

Bryan yesterday had one experience of which few grownups outside the government service can boast. Through a door purposely left ajar, he watched the reception that preceded the formal dinner last night in honor of the King and Queen of Siam.

The boy was not able to attend the dinner because it was a highly official function for officials only. But in the children's room on the third floor of the executive mansion he ate the same kind of food that was served to King Prajadhipok and Queen Rambai Barni in the panelled state dining room.

VAUGHAN'S GAY FETES PROBED

but also because they assisted him in the work of liquidating the banks.

The attorney-general is investigating the alleged responsibility of Bank Commissioner Guy to check up on Vaughan, whose sharked financial affairs are being probed by three counties, Middlesex, Suffolk and Essex.

Mastaglio and Cotter, who are law students, have proved to be the most important witnesses against their friend and associate, it was stated.

LAWRENCE BANK CASE

Both have been held on their personal recognizance as material state witnesses in Middlesex County, where three indictments for larceny have been returned against Vaughan.

They also will be summoned before the Suffolk grand jury on Monday and will be witnesses in Essex County when Dist. Atty. Hugh A. Cregg presents the case of the Fabrizio Pitocchelli Bank of Lawrence, Dist. Atty. William J. Foley today turned over to Dist. Atty. Cregg important evidence for action in Essex County.

"GENEROUS TO A FAULT"

Mastaglio and Cotter revealed that Vaughan paid their tuition in law school, furnished them with lodging and meals, and took them on trips in return for assistance in handling the affairs of the wrecked banks.

They also admitted having collected $1000 a month rent from the various properties of the banks which was taken to the apartment and used for current expenses.

Vaughan, they said, was generous to a fault, even going without necessaries himself at times that he might help his friends. He cared little for his personal appearance, but was fond of good literature and often sat up most of the night reading.

The two young men said they first met Vaughan when he was assisting in the liquidation of the Cosmopolitan Trust Co., where they were employed as clerks, several years ago.

PAID THEIR TUITION.

Mastaglio and Cotter helped Vaughan in his work and, as a result, he became so interested he induced them to enter law school at his expense.

Later Vaughan left his wealthy parents' home in Cedar pk., Melrose, where he and his brother, Lee, had lived, and leased the Pinckney st. apartment, taking the two students in with him.

He engaged a Filipino for the double role of valet and chef, and entertained extensively.

Vaughan took his young friends with him to Florida and on other trips, it was revealed, and Mastaglio accompanied him to Europe, where for two months they sojourned in England, France and Germany.

On March 3 last when Vaughan went to Washington in his high-priced car, Mastaglio accompanied him. It was planned, according to Mastaglio, for him to remain from Tuesday until Friday, but suddenly Vaughan changed his plans and sent the young man home.

FLOOD OF LETTERS.

The authorities are now convinced that Vaughan decided that early to become a fugitive because of his tangled affairs. Officials investigating the case say they are satisfied, too, that Mastaglio and Cotter, suspected when they got a flood of letters and telegrams from Vaughan in Washington that something was wrong. Vaughan wired that he had sent back his winter overcoat and books by express.

It is thought that he may have bought an entirely new outfit when he checked out of the Washington hotel on March 26, the day after Frederick D. Bonner, now acting as temporary receiver, had held a long interview with him in that city.

The officials suspect that when Vaughan wired to Cotter and Mastaglio for $100, that it may have been a pretext to conceal the fact that he had ample funds when he left Boston. None of Vaughan's relatives, business associates or friends fear that he has committed suicide. They said today they didn't think he was the type to even entertain such a thought.

The hunt for the missing receiver will today extend into Washington and Baltimore, he having been last heard in the capital. Lieut. James F. Daley, with a warrant for Vaughan's arrest, will confer with hotel men and friends of Vaughan in Washington.

DIAMOND'S GIRL FRIEND SOUGHT

sought safety from gang guns at his Acra estate, she joined the chorus of "Flying High" under the name of Dorothy Dixon, girl friend was in Chicago when the show closed there a month ago.

Diamond took the Boston girl to Acra, despite the presence there of his own wife.

REGIONED GANGSTER

Mrs. Grace Stramick, mother of Miss Roberts, went from Boston to New York in an effort to break up the romance, succeeding in getting the girl away from Diamond for a short time. She later reported to New York police that the girl had eluded her and joined the racketeer.

Miss Roberts fled from Acra two days ago just before the Diamond stronghold was raided. Whether she came at once to Boston or actually evaded New York police in an intensive search that began last night, is not known.

State troopers, on orders of the New York attorney-general, stopped private automobiles and even transcontinental buses in the search.

"Take off your hat!" was the police command to many male motorists—to make sure no woman was masquerading in men's attire. Women seated in cars were required to alight while police compared their features with photographs of Diamond's sweetheart.

Meanwhile "Legs" Diamond himself lay in Albany General Hospital stealing deep sleep, induced partly by narcotics, from which, it was stated, he might never awaken. He is suffering from pleurisy.

"Diamond is in no shape for an operation," said Dr. Thomas M. Holmes, his physician. "I would say that if an operation becomes necessary he has not more than one chance in a million."

CALLS UP CORONER.

Shortly after this, Dr. Holmes put his long-distance telephone call to Coroner Atkinson in Albany. Coroner Atkinson's part of the conversation was, roughly, as follows:

"Hello, 222, yes, this is the coroner. 22 What? 22? Why, if he does, the autopsy will have to be performed here. He was shot here 22. What's that?

"I can't help what Judge Prior thinks. If Diamond died in Albany County has jurisdiction. Yes, that's my opinion. All right. Goodbye."

Coroner Atkinson stated that Dr. Holmes had telephoned to ask him "where the autopsy would be performed—in Greene County or in Albany County," if Diamond died.

Miss Roberts is 21. She was born in Worthington st., Roxbury. Her mother and many of her relatives still live there.

She went to New York at the age of 16 and stepped right into the Music Box Revue. Her shapely figure, her talented features and her titian hair carried her through a succession of musical shows until she met disaster at the Club Abbey, Broadway, a year ago.

DIDN'T KNOW MEN

When questioned about the shooting of Diamond at the Monticello, she said he was in her room, that she was about to step into a bathtub when two men knocked at the door and Diamond stepped into the corridor with them.

"I saw them but I didn't know them—it isn't true that I knew them," she said at that time.

OLIVER BLAMED FOR SLAYING

John J. Oliver was directly accused of the slaying of Evangelists L. Ragni, Somerville gas station manager, in the opening of the defence of his two co-defendants in Middlesex court this afternoon.

Counsel for John J. Wall told of the three drinking "wine spiits" and Sousa's attorney said Oliver was "crazy drunk" when the crime was committed.

Previous to the openings of Isadore Fox for Wall and James S. Cannon for Sousa, Atty. William H. Lewis, counsel for Oliver, was denied a motion for a mistrial on the grounds that evidence of Police Chief Damery of Somerville had been ruled out after the jury listened to it.

"Wall met Oliver and Sousa that night (February 24) and Oliver suggested a holdup," Fox said in his opening.

"They had been drinking alcohol mixed with soda.

"Wall passed several gas stations before they stopped at this one and Sousa and Oliver went in.

"He does not know what happened inside, but he heard a shot and saw Sousa running toward the car with Oliver behind him.

"Oliver said 'I think I hit him and both were excited.'

Cannon described an argument in the automobile between the three in which Wall and Sousa tried to take a gun away from Oliver.

"Oliver was crazy drunk and ordered Wall to stop the car or he'd blow out the windows. They, Sousa and Wall, tried to get the gun away from him but couldn't.

"At the gas station, Sousa was coming out the door when he heard a shot behind him and then he heard a second shot before Oliver came out. There was no robbery committed and my client took part in no assault.

SCATTER GUNS AND GAS TO CHECK REDS

300 Extra Police Ordered to Be Ready to Stop May Day Demonstrations

With riot guns and tear gas, the law prepared today for possible May Day demonstrations of Communists scheduled tomorrow.

In Boston, 200 police were assigned with orders to work quietly at vantage points but ready for immediate action should any outbreak arise.

Their interest will be centered mostly on Boston Common, where a Communistic program is scheduled at the same time patriotic exercises will be held by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Massachusetts Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The Communist demonstration will be held on the Charles st. mall, according to leaders, with Richard B. Moore, negro orator and national director of the International Labor Defense, as speaker.

BUILDINGS GUARDED

At the patriotic exercises, Congressman Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, chairman of the congressional committee on Communism, will deliver the principal address.

Gov. Joseph B. Ely and Mayor James M. Curley are also included in the list of speakers.

Police Supt. Michael H. Crowley will personally supervise the policing of both meetings, his men ready for instant action in the event of outbreaks.

Three patrol wagons with 150 of the old time night sticks, guns and tear bombs will be sent to the Common ready for action.

In addition, he announced today, subway entrances, public buildings and other public places will be well guarded during the day by uniformed and plain clothes men of his department.

The regular force of guards at the State House will be reinforced for the day by details of State police and additional government guards have been assigned to the custom house and other federal buildings.

New York and other principal cities of the country made similar preparations today when details of plans of the Communists reached police circles.

The annual demonstration in Union sq., New York, will include representatives of 50 communistic and socialistic organizations, police learned today. In the past they have brought many torrid encounters with police.

The Nicaraguan situation will be included in the Communist programs, it was indicated today, in a circular of the All-American Anti-Imperialistic League of New York.

An appeal for support of the Sandino forces there against "foreign oppressors and the rule of Yankee marines" was contained in the circular.

WANT MARINES BACK.

A circular that reaching the offices of Congressman Fish read:

"In the May Day demonstrations all workers are called upon to protest and fight against the continued sending of marines to slaughter the Nicaraguan anti-imperialist fighters.

"Demand the marines be withdrawn from Nicaragua.

More than 250 school children of Boston will celebrate May Day tomorrow with a parade and and fete at the Frong Pond on Boston Common.

Under the supervision of the Community House the program will start at 11 a. m. and end at noon with music for the occasion to be provided by the band of the House of the Angel Guardian.

He ordered a police guard for every pierhead and public building and for homes of prominent citizens, and asked every precinct commander, especially those near Union sq., the center of Communist speechmaking, to keep reserve squads ready. He said he expected no trouble.

The spotlight will fall mainly on the Communists, Socialists and Veterans of Foreign Wars, all of whom have arranged to meet in Union sq. at hours prescribed by the police department, so as to avoid possible conflict.

Police All Over World Prepare for May Day

London, April 30 (AP)—Police of much of the world today made preparations to maintain order during widespread observance of Labor Day.

In England May Day celebrations are somewhat out of fashion and little beyond some soap-box oratory and a few small processions was expected in London, but elsewhere in Europe and in Spanish America observances of the day presented a more serious problem.

The police of Berlin, where the celebration two years ago culminated in serious rioting which lasted for two days, will be mobilized for the day and a rigid curb placed upon demonstrations.

Police in some of the Britain countries forbade celebrations, but in others permitted demonstrations under strict supervision. Observation of May Day was abolished several years ago in Italy.

FARM BEAUTY SLAIN AFTER LOVE BATTLE, OFFICIAL SAYS

OTHER MAN NOW IS SOUGHT IN KIRK SLAYING

Connecticut Town Is Divided Over Naming of Wetmore, Suicide Youth, as Killer

By a Staff Correspondent

Hamden, Ct., April 30—Two men fought over Emily Kirk and one of them fled, leaving her to the jealous rage of the other, who attacked and killed her, Medical Examiner George H. Joslin declared today, summarizing his views of the murder.

With County Coroner James J. Corrigan, the medical experts believes that the suicide of William Wetmore, a relative by marriage of the slain girl, solved the mystery—that Wetmore killed the girl in jealousy.

OFFICIALS AT ODDS

But both officials are anxious to clear up various phases of the case and in addition to seeking "the other man" are supervising a widespread hunt for the revolver with which the girl was shot before her life was crushed out with a rock.

Dr. Joslin's announcement of his opinion gave this town another sensation and caused an even wider split between two factions, one of which believes Wetmore guilty, while the other holds him innocent.

Even the investigating officials are at odds over the case, for the police board voted that it was not at all satisfied Wetmore killed Emily Kirk, and ordered a continuance of the probe.

The medical examiner's theory is that Wetmore met Miss Kirk outside the fire station Saturday night when she left the scene of festivities to change into a party dress.

He believes she rebuffed him, because her parents had forbidden their marriage, and that she then took a walk with the mysterious "other man."

Wetmore, he thinks, may have trailed the couple, overtaken them and swung on the other youth, vanquishing him and driving him to flight.

Then, according to this theory, he whirled on the girl, whom he called his sweetheart, and in his jealous rage knocked her unconscious with a ginger ale bottle, attacked her, fired four bullets into her body and finally dropped the rock on her head.

A curious feature of the case, in Dr. Joslin's opinion, is that in all probability Emily Kirk had affection for nobody else but Wetmore, but she was inclined to obey her parents, and therefore refused to marry him.

SEEK OTHER MAN

"The other man has faded out of the picture, but we expect he will reappear," said Dr. Joslin.

Coroner Corrigan said he had information which led him to expect the missing revolver might be produced within a short time.

He revealed that Mrs. Charles Kirk, mother of the slain girl, admitted opposing the marriage of her daughter and Wetmore and stated her reasons, which he withheld.

While Corrigan discontinued his questioning of townspeople for additional information, police officials were busy on several lines of investigation, among these being a search for a possible accessory to the murder.

Some hold the opinion that the girl kept a tryst with Wetmore that night and this developed into a quarrel which led to the slaying with or without the help of another man.

WETMORE UNMASKED

The theory that another man was directly involved is based on the fact that the girl had evidently put up a struggle.

Mrs. Maud Wetmore, mother of William, collapsed last night and today she was under the care of relatives, who said she expressed the desire to die, as a result of the persecution and suicide of her son, whom she believes innocent.

Bullets taken from the body of Miss Kirk are to be compared with those found in Wetmore's room by experts of the Winchester Repeating Arms Co.

"No basic facts have developed to alter my belief that Wetmore killed Miss Kirk," said Coroner Corrigan this afternoon. He added that he hoped to clear up details of the mystery before handing in his formal report.

BODY OF GIRL IS UNCLAIMED

The body of an unidentified girl 20 to 25 years old who collapsed last night in the Everett terminal of the Elevated remained unclaimed at the Northern Mortuary this afternoon. She was dead when taken to Massachusetts General Hospital after her collapse.

Miss Julia Gueglines of 178 Eastern ave., Malden, told police the girl approached her and complained of feeling ill, then fell.

She was described as five feet five inches tall, with gray eyes and light brown hair. A left front tooth in her upper jaw has a gold backing.

She was dressed in a gray coat, blue flowered dress, tan stockings and black shoes. She carried a black traveling case containing a dress and a pair of shoes.

DEATH SOLVES DEATH

LOVE SLAYING VICTIM

VASE AND BOX ALSO THROWN, HE CHARGES

Claims His Spouse Called Him Names and Ordered Him Out of the House

Testimony that his wife ordered him out of the house, threw spinach in his face, jumped on his stomach and bit him on the shoulder, was given in Middlesex probate court today by Attorney Hyman Gessman of 35 Wave way, Revere.

Seeking a divorce from Mrs. Bertha R. Gessman of 81 Jasseli st., Newton, Gessman told Judge John R. Leggat his wife's cruelty caused him to lose 15 pounds in weight.

The couple have one child, born last September.

SEVERED BY WIFE

Relating acts of alleged cruelty by his wife, Atty. Gessman testified that on one occasion she was putting on lipstick and he objected. He quoted his wife as replying:

"I'm not going out with you. The boy friend I'm going out with will like it."

At another time, he said, he was washing dishes and broke one.

"My wife yelled and cursed and called me a helpless fool and a drunkard," he testified.

The spinach-throwing incident Gessman said occurred on night when he came home and found creamed spinach on the table for supper.

His said he told his wife he did not like creamed spinach, to which she replied: "Sorry, but you'll have to eat it."

TARGET FOR VASE

"I said: 'But I don't like it' and she threw it in my face."

"Do yours asked: "It didn't hurt much, did it?"

"No," replied Gessman.

"You weren't afraid?"

"Yes, I was afraid. I didn't know what she'd do next. About three weeks later she hit me over the head with the heel of her shoe."

On another occasion, the witness said, he overheard his wife telling friends what a loafer he was.

"When she saw me listening she threw a vase at me and hit me on the toe," he said.

Gessman further testified that twice Mrs. Gessman ordered him out of the house, saying:

"If you don't like teh way I run my house, get out and stay out."

The witness said he heard his wife on one occasion tell a man how many gifts her former sweetheart had given her before her marriage, including an automobile and jewelry. The man replied, he said:

"It looks like you got stuck."

Judge Leggat asked Gessman if he blamed his wife for this, and the witness said:

"Yes, and it made me feel like a two-cent piece."

He denied he offered to become reconciled if his wife would pay him $5000, declaring he would not live with Mrs. Gessman for $10,000. He also denied striking his wife just before their child was born.

Jackman, Me., April 30—While scores of woodsmen and guides combed the dense woods here for the body of Mitchell B. Kaufman, missing Boston rubber magnate, new clues pointing toward murder were indicated in the arrival of a crack operative from the Pinkerton detective agency.

TRAIN WRECKS AUTO; 2 HELD

Sterling, April 30—A two-gallon jug of hard cider was found intact early today after the State of Maine express had demolished an automobile abandoned on the tracks near here.

Two Worcester men, found wandering near the Boston & Maine railroad right of way, were arrested for drunkenness.

They were booked as Armand A. Lafleur, of Isabella st., and Norman Caldbeck, 25, of Minthorn st., Worcester.

The accident occurred several hundred yards from the Sterling Junction bridge which carries the Worcester-Fitchburg state road over the Boston & Maine tracks.

There is no crossing at the point where the machine was struck, and after Engineer Hardwell had stopped the train, the crew were puzzled to account for the automobile on the tracks.

The story told by Latiqq and Caldbeck was that they were held up on the bridge by two armed men, who forced them out of the car, drove it down a footpath and along the tracks.

According to the Worcester men, the bandits leaped from the automobile and fled when they saw the train approaching.

STUDENTS BALK AT CLARK MARKS

Worcester, April 30 The charge that the present system of marking at Clark University is "unreasonable, unjust and conducive to cheating," has been made by the majority of the student body, it was learned today.

Complaints against the marking system were embodied in a petition signed by 203 of the less than 300 students, and presented to Dean Homer P. Little.

The petition suggested the Harvard system be adopted and asked for a meeting between members of the faculty and delegates of the student body to discuss the matter.

Five years ago the students of the university declared a strike because of dissatisfaction over the rule of President Wallace A. Atwood.

The petition presented to Dean Little charged that the present system of marking fosters a "destructive and unprogressive attitude" and places overemphasis on marks.

The signers included the presidents of all four classes and four of the seven members of the Clark Scholarship Society.

DEATH COCKTAIL ENDS TRIANGLE

Chicago, April 30 (INS)—Remnants of a death cocktail, a dozen love letters professing undying affection, and a distraught and heartbroken husband were all that remained today in the romance of J. T. Hartung of Columbus, O., and his married sweetheart, Mrs. Kathleen Garrison of Kalamazoo, Mich.

The unconsolable husband is Ralph Garrison, who became reconciled to his erring wife only to have her snatched from him several minutes later by death.

Hartung brought to a tragic end the clandestine love affair with a death cocktail of poisoned liquor which he and Mrs. Garrison drank in the presence of the woman's husband and Mrs. H. M. Jones, a friend of the family, in the Hismarcx Hotel, where the couple had lived together since Monday.

Mrs. Garrison appeared at the hotel last night with her husband and Mrs. Jones. As they entered the room of Hartung, Garrison with a smile announced:

"My wife and I have patched up our troubles and she is going back home with us."

Hartung apparently was not surprised. He smiled and nodded his head in agreement. He walked to a serving table, poured out two drinks of liquor and returned to where Mrs. Garrison was packing her grips. He said:

"Let us have one more drink before we part."

Mrs. Garrison smiled and accepted one of them. Both raised the glasses to their lips, and they drank together.

'DEATH RIDE' OF BRANNEN GIRL TOLD BY TWO

New York, April 30 (AP)—Police today were seeking Rudolph Durniger of Ossining, a truckman, for his explanation of an automobile ride which began at the door of a dance hall early Sunday and ended in the killing of Virginia Brannen, of Bangor, Me., hostess at a dime dance hall.

The abandoned automobile which was used on the ride was found yesterday in the Bronx. Shortly afterwards police, having checked the license plates, arrested Robert La Clair, 23, and Mildred Moore, 35, who admitted they were with Miss Brannen at the time of the shooting. The story they told was this:

When Miss Brannen finished her work at the dance hall at 3 o'clock Sunday morning, she got into the automobile with Durniger, LaClair, Mrs. Moore and a "Thomas Jordan of Eighth ave." They drove to a nearby speakeasy, stayed there until it closed at 6 o'clock. Finally they got back into the car and started for Ossining.

Mrs. Moore and LaClair, stupefied by liquor, said they fell asleep in the front seat beside Jordan, who was driving. They were awakened on the outskirts of the city by a series of shots. They heard Miss Brannen scream from the back seat, and, turning, said they saw Durniger with a gun in his hand.

Hoovers Knew the Wishes of a Queen

Washington, April 30 (AP)—President and Mrs. Hoover had three good reasons for selecting Miss Mildred Dilling to play the harp at last night's formal state dinner for the King and Queen of Siam.

The first reason is because Miss Dilling is one of the country's foremost harpists. The second reason was because Miss Dilling is a longtime friend of the Hoover family.

The third reason was because the queen is a harpist and it is her favorite form of music.

By WILLIAM G. HOSIE.

New York, April 30—Take her! She's yours for a dime . . . The taxi dancer.

Tan cents a dance. Hold her in your arms while the muted jazz throbs and pulses through your brain. Feel her lithe body, her sure, graceful feet moving in unison with the slow, savage tempo. . . . The taxi dancer.

Where does she come from? Why is she here? Where is she bound?

Take the story of Virginia Christina Brannen of Bangor, Me., as an illustration. She came from a small town, a respectable home—

SMASHED BY GRIND

Not that they all die violently and swiftly. But their youth is murdered, stifled, smashed by the dreadful grind of—ten cents a dance.

"Ten cents a dance—pennies and Rough guys who tear at my gown."

That's the song of the sisterhood of girls who came to the big town full of dreams of success, dreams that were smashed swiftly and utterly and left them with nothing but—

Ten cents a dance.

But even in the smoke-laden murk of tinsaled dance halls these sisters of failure reach out for romance. They try for happiness in the only way they know—and if at first they don't succeed they try, try again.

GROPED FOR HAPPINESS

Virginia Brannen groped for happiness time and time again, and her groping fingers touched only the counterfeit love.

But finally, three short weeks before she died, she found romance. Her big moment was a strong red-headed youth named Miller—Henry W. Miller, Jr.

He had seen the world. He had served four years as a first-class seaman in the Navy. He had been in the Far East and he had had women in every port. Then came Virginia first. He saw her in the Primrose Dance Hall in Harlem. She was on sale for a dime, "customers crushing her toes."

"Cmon, big boy, 10 cents a dance."

The refrain of the melody throbbed in Miller's brain. He tapped her on the shoulder and showed her the ticket he had bought for a dime.

Away they whirled on the crest of a wave of music that carried her through a swift romance of three weeks to her death.

There was shy conversation during the dance. She saw his Navy ring and said:

"I see you've been in the Navy."

He said, "Yeah."

She said, "Do you know a sailor named Gillette?"

He said, "I know one named Gillette who's a pharmacist's mate on the Trenton."

She said, "That's the one I know."

It wasn't brilliant conversation. It didn't move swiftly. But it served its purpose. It helped these two puppets of fate to know each other. It helped bridge the distances that separated them as complete strangers. It was part of the mysterious process known to the dime a dance sisterhood as "getting better acquainted."

LOVE IN A MOVIE

It was a Sunday night. They promised to see each other Tuesday night. Miller met her at 7:30 on a street corner at 116th ave. and 126th st. They went to a movie. They held hands and whispered in the dark.

They walked from the theater to the dance hall where Virginia was on any man's girl for a dime, and on the way they talked inarticulately of the future, of the things they had been and the pieces they would like to see.

"Where would you like to go?" Miller asked.

"It wouldn't matter so long as I were with you."

Miller didn't say anything. It sounded like a "line" to him. But he told her he would see her Thursday night and that night he called for her at the home of Mrs. Alice Perro, 382 E. 126th st., with whom she lived.

THE FIRST KISS

When Miller arrived young Tom Perro, son of Mrs. Perro, was telling Virginia's fortune. They all said the fortune fitted her to perfection. Miller got a thrill because he had overheard the amateur fortune-teller reveal that Virginia was living a fast life.

"She was cordial and glad to see me," said Miller later of his first visit to Virginia's home, "and much to my surprise she kissed me."

It was the first kiss. It was not like the terrible devastating kisses that came later when the boy and girl found themselves in the grip of a tempestuous love—a love that was to sweep Virginia to her doom. This was a chaste salutation.

Miller and the girl left the Perro home for the dance hall. They had plenty of time and on the way they window shopped, and talked of the things they would buy if they had money. Window shopping is one of the chief amusements of the ten cents a dance sisterhood. "Dream shopping," Virginia called it.

FOUND RIGHT PERSON

Dancing together later to the blaring orchestra, each thought a lot of the other, each thought of the splendid fun they had had spending imaginary money for imaginary purchases.

Saturday afternoon found them together again. Miller wanted to take her to an expensive theater, but Virginia learned that he only had $5. She would not let him waste his money. They went to a cheap movie near Times sq.

Again they held hands in the dark and this time there was a terrible excitement in the touch of hand-to-hand. Later on the way home on the "L"—

"How long do you think it takes a person to fall in love, Harry?"

"Well, it don't take but a minute if the right person comes along."

"Harry, I think the right person has come along," whispered the girl.

This mysterious something that had suddenly come to them made them both shy. Miller was inarticulate. The best he could blurt out was:

"I'm glad to hear that, because I think quite a bit of you."

REPROACHED HIM

Oblivious to those around them, they held hands in the elevated train. There was a Chinese sitting opposite them. Miller had told the girl that he had been in China and had known Chinese women.

"Look at the Chink," said the girl. I don't know how you did it. That skin. Those slanty eyes. That yellow face. Oh, Harry, how could you do it?"

Swiftly her mood changed. With her fingers she pulled back the corners of her eyes in imitation of a Chinese girl. She grinned up at Harry. They both laughed. Then a frown passed over her face.

"Well," she said, "I can say this much. I've been out with a lot of men, but I've never had anything but a white man."

"Well, honey, you're a girl. You don't understand. But it seems kind of funny being out in a country for 18 months where there are very few white people, and after a while a fellow sort of drifts into it."

Tomorrow the Boston Evening American will describe the swift ripening of this ten cents a dance romance that led to death for the girl and misery for the boy.

Two brothers, both well known members of the City Hall organization, will be sworn in as lawyers tomorrow. They are Philip A. Chapman, head of the city supply department, and John J. Chapman, who works in the office of the assessors. They are graduates of Suffolk Law School. QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 20 years, and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They help cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver—constipation, you should find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets.

Receivers of the defunct Boston Manufacturing Co. of Waltham today were authorized by Judge Wilford D. Gray in Superior Court to pay a second dividend to the firm's creditors. The new dividend amounts to $ 2.3-5 per cent by the total indebtedness.

The receivers, Lafayette Chamberlain and George W. Summersby, were also allowed an additional payment to themselves of $5000 each for services since December, 1930. The company has now paid off a total of 23 1-5 per cent of its indebtedness.

KING MUST GO UNDER KNIFE, SAYS EXPERT

Baltimore, April 30 (AP)—Dr. William Holland Wilmer, noted specialist, today told the King of Siam that an operation on the cataract of his left eye was "absolutely necessary" to save the sight of that optic.

After the examination, King Prajadhipok, Prince Svasti his father-in-law, who accompanied him here, and Dr. Wilmer went to luncheon in the physician's home.

Dr. Wilmer found that the cataract on the Oriental potentate's right eye had not advanced beyond the conditions in which he found it in 1924 when he made an examination before Prajadhipok became king.

The cataract on the left eye, however, he said, had not responded to the treatment which was prescribed at that time.

The examination took 55 minutes and Dr. Wilmer said his report would be forwarded to Dr. John M. Wheeler of New York, who will perform the operation.

An escort of Washington and Baltimore police cleared the way for the royal motorcade through the streets to the hospital. Aides of the official party the King did not wear a silk top hat. He wore a derby.

In the party was Rear Admiral Henry V. Butler, who has been appointed the King's naval aide during his visit to this country.

2 STOWAWAYS SEIZED HERE

Two stowaways, who said they 500 francs each for help in secreting themselves aboard the vessel, were found by customs boarding officers today when the steamship Pipestone County arrived from Dunkirk and Havre.

They gave their names as Angelo Sarillo, 25, and Vito Ferreir, 44, both natives of Italy. They were found in the hold and said a man at Dunkirk, not a seaman, helped them aboard.

They were turned over to immigration authorities and will be sent back. The vessel brought 339 bags of pebbles, 600 tons of pipe, and a large quantity of rags, talc, furniture and other merchandise.

MEDICAL TEST FOR E. E. GRAY ORDERED

A medical examination of Elmer E. Gray, former chain store head, to determine if he can stand trial on indictments in connection with the operation of his bankrupt company, was ordered today by Atty.-Gen. Joseph E. Warner.

Warner assigned Dr. Charles P. Sylvester of the State Board of Medicine to examine Gray and report to him.

Gray has been confined to his home at 1396 Commonwealth ave., Brighton, suffering from a heart ailment. His physicians reported that his removal to court to plead to the indictments might prove serious.

The Gray indictments were returned after an investigation of the company by Atty.-Gen. Warner.

KING GEORGE TAKES WALK

Windsor, Eng., April 30 (AP)—King George emerged from Windsor Castle today for the first time since announcement of his illness made a month ago. He was accompanied by Queen Mary on a walk about the grounds of the castle.

They strolled through the park for nearly an hour, the king wearing an overcoat and a bowler hat. At Frogmore, half a mile from the castle, an automobile picked them up and they came back for luncheon.

The king let it be known he had enjoyed the fresh air and sunshine after his long siege.

N. E. COAL MEN ASK RATE CUT

Washington, April 30 (AP)—The New England market for anthracite coal—one of the largest in the country—may be considerably enlarged during the next winter season as a result of freight rate proceedings to get under way soon.

In the most comprehensive attempt of New England dealers in nearly a decade to force a rate reduction on Pennsylvania anthracite, retailers of that region have been granted permission by the Interstate Commerce Commission to present proof that the present rates are too high.

Hearings will begin at Boston June 30 in the case before examiners of the commission. The date of hearings should permit a decision before the advent of the domestic coal burning season.

A decision upholding the complaint, which maintains $1 per ton should be lopped off the present freight rates, would undoubtedly affect the anthracite mining industry of Pennsylvania by enlarging the demand. Such an order would be welcomed by operators and miners.

Horse Lovers' Dinner Is Gala Event at Statler

SUMMERS MAY COME AND winters may go, but horse shows go on forever. Last night at the Hotel Statler a most delightful dinner and a miniature horse show was enjoyed by the Horse Lovers of Boston and vicinity. Over a thousand members of the equine sport, including many women, gathered in the Imperial ballroom to show their interest in this annual get-together of the horse-loving world. Walter E. Fewkert, chairman of the dinner committee, and his able associates made everyone feel right at home, and Mr. James F. Young as toastmaster kept the ball rolling.

GOVERNOR ELY MADE HIS entrance like Paul Revere, astride a magnificent steed on the stage. Mayor Curley chose to arrive in a phaeton, driving a handsome dappled gray as though he liked it. The center of the ballroom was a small show ring, and champions of the turf were shown, among many others Flag of Exshire, owned by George Lamson, and the champion saddle horse of America, owned by F. Harold Pullman, Forrester (Tim) Clarke rode in on a polo pony, while his fiancee, Miss Kitty Burrage, looked proudly on. Mrs. Sydney J. Winslow, Jr., drove her entry, which she had trained, into the ring. The younger generation was represented in the pony class by the Scudder children, the Wilson children and one of the Loomis. In the trotting class Mr. Allen J. Wilson showed in colors with a sporty looking trotter.

NOT THE LEAST ENJOYABLE part of the program were the moving pictures of the Grand National English race; they were superb. This is the second time these pictures have been shown in America, the first being at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York last week. During the dinner a musical program was enjoyed and several tableaux depicting scenes of the hunt, very realistic and lending atmosphere to the occasion. The 101th Cavalry Band played martial airs with a gusto that contributed to the spirit of the event and with the Star Spangled Banner the sport of kings is off with a good start for 1931.

WITH HUNDREDS OF PERSONS present, it was indeed difficult to find familiar faces, but we did glimpse that prince of the sporting world, Bayard Tuckerman, and the George Balcomstall Wests of Chestnut Hill. Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Almy looking like the original happily married after celebrating their sixth wedding anniversary on Saturday, and another happy pair, Miss Burrage and Mr. Clarke, recently engaged. Mr. W. J. McDonald entertained the mayor and Miss Mary Curley in his box with Mr. and Mrs. Bradbury Cushing, Dr. and Mrs. Bruce, Mr. and Mrs. Scudder and their attractive children. In the Reginald Bird party was Miss Betty Bird, Miss Dorothy Preston, Miss Barbara Frost and Miss Cynthia Waters and their escorts. Mrs. William C. Cox and her sister, Miss Jane Bancroft, and brother, Hugh, Jr., were interested spectators.

Woolens Rule During the Summer

By ANN ARDEN

MOST OF the new collections shown in Paris have many dresses and suits made of wool. They seem to foreshadow a woolen summer. There are woolen coats, flannel and tricot suits, flannel sports coats, white wool coats for afternoon and evening, flannel lounging pajamas and even, for evening, pajamas made of broadcloth.

* * *

THERE WERE several flannel suits in pastel shades. Even for sports wear the pale pastels transcend the more brilliant colors.

* * *

IF YOU are questioning whether or not you can stand wool for summer wear, since it is to be about the smartest thing for sports then try out the venture with a dress of kid Angora. You will never know that you are wearing wool, so delightful is it to the touch. Then also, it comes in the faintest and loveliest of pastel colorings so becoming that you can hardly resist its appeal.

* * *

THE TWO-TONE Angora sports outfit pictured is interchangeable to form other costumes and color combinations. The one-piece frock is toned soft rose beige, intersecting bias seams mark the skirt, surplice revers edged in pleated frills outline the neck, and repeat on cuffs of the wrist length sleeves. The belt is of the material with brown buckle.

* * *

THE BROWN reefer jacket has softly folded revers, slit pockets, and nickel buttons for its double breasted closing and sleeve fastening. The hat of brown felt has patent leather edging brim and banding crown, topped with beige and brown leather quills. The gloves are beige pull-ons, the bag brown pin seal, with touch of beige, and the pearls are rose tinted. A delightful outing costume—don't you agree?

* * *

THERE IS a trend, and a very sensible one, to make spectator sports things so simple and well-tailored that they can appear equally well in town. This will be a boon to those women who spend the greater part of their time in the country and hate to have innumerable changes of costume.

* * *

* * *

A PROPER costume for the year's first innings of golf may fashionably be a soft little dress with warmth and a tailored air to it. Kid Angora is suggested as the material, a fabric as soft and fuzzy as a kitten and unusually effective in colors. The fabric features both one- and two-piece models.

JURY PROBE OF RUSSELL CASE ON TOMORROW

By JAMES J. SMITH

Fall River, April 30—Dr. George Burgess Magrath today will make at least a partial report of his observations on the body of Verna Russell at the exhumation last Monday, to Dist. Atty. William C. Crossley, who has returned here from Barnstable.

Dist. Atty. Crossley will be acquainted for the first time with the condition of the girl's teeth and how she came by her injuries. The matter of strangulation also will be discussed.

THROAT STUDIED

Although Dr. Charles W. Bryant, Tiverton medical examiner, refused to state whether the girl's throat was opened at the second examination, it is known that Dr. Magrath spent some five hours in exhaustive study of the girl's body. It is assumed to be certain that the matter of strangulation was thoroughly probed.

It is expected that this preliminary report of the Boston pathologist will shed considerable light on the theory that a doctor was involved in attempts to revive the student nurse. It will also probably decide whether Hathaway was assisted by another man.

Dr. Magrath has paid particular attention to photographs taken of the girl's body when it was found in Winward's lane.

It is certain that Dr. Magrath's complete report to the district attorney on the second examination will take several days, because of painstaking methods of the pathologist. However, the skeleton report today will aid Crossley in his investigation to determine jurisdiction.

In addition to Dr. Magrath's report, Crossley has in his possession the detailed report on the radio program as presented by Station WJZ, at Bound Brook, N. J., between the hours of 10 and 11 on March 23, the murder night. This program was forwarded by officials of the radio station at the suggestion of Albert G. Winward.

Winward had checked his testimony given to Massachusetts officials by means of the radio program and had written to the station in order they might back his evidence. Because of the circumstances station officials refused, saying they would report the program to none but the prosecuting officials. Winward immediately suggested forwarding the report to Crossley.

GUARD HATHAWAY

In Rhode Island Atty.-Gen. McLyman will present his evidence to a special session of the Newport grand jury tomorrow in an attempt to indict Elliott Hathaway for the girl's murder. Hathaway will be taken to the session from the Providence County jail. His friend, Vernon Galvin, Rhode Island state troopers and several former girl friends of the accused youth will be among the witnesses.

Rhode Island officials will take extraordinary precautions to protect Hathaway on his trip from the jail to Newport. He will have a motorcycle escort and will be heavily guarded.

Fear has been expressed that some attempt might be made to harm young Hathaway, especially in Portsmouth, where the slain girl and her family are highly regarded. The citizens there are, still very bitter and the alleged pampering of young Hathaway throughout the case has not helped to allay their feelings.

Reports have been received of threats against the youth, and the undercurrent of hostility throughout the state has led to the decision to afford the youth every protection. The courthouse will also be heavily guarded.

There is much conjecture here as to Hathaway's plea should he be indicted. There is also considerable comment both here, and in Rhode Island, regarding the rumors that Hathaway might be indicted for second degree murder or even manslaughter.

RAIN FORECAST FOR 25 YEARS PREDICTED

Washington, April 30 (AP)—The opinion that future weather prophets may be able to forecast droughts and wet spells as much as 25 years ahead was expressed today before the American Geophysical Union.

A. F. Gorton of the Scripps Institution of Oceanography of California, said upward and downward trends in rainfall might be detected that number of years in advance by closer study of sunspots and the output of heat from the surface of the oceans.

There is evidence that rainfall increases in regular cycles over certain regions, he told the union, which opened its annual meeting here today.

If the length of these cycles can be established accurately it will be of enormous economic value to industry and agriculture, Gorton said.

Rainfall cycles may be related to changes in the amount of radiation from the sun, Gorton said. He advanced the theory that major seasonal weather changes on the continents may be caused by variations in the heat given off by the surface of oceans.

There is increasing evidence that sunspots and weather are related in some way, it was pointed out. Violent storms occur in the eastern United States when sunspots are numerous.

Rainfall records kept for many years at Boston, Charleston, South Carolina and Nona Indiana, Texas may be long rainfall cycles of from 70 to 80 years, Gorton said. California records seem to reveal long cycles of 20 years, and shorter ones of two and three, five to six and 22 to 24 years.

FIGHT DUE HERE OVER MILLIONS BY REFUGEES

An international suit, involving bank deposits of Russian refugees totalling $11,224,336, will be heard in Suffolk Superior Court June 10, with John W. Davis of West Virginia included in an imposing array of counsel.

Mr. Davis, Democratic candidate for the presidential election won by the late President Harding, has been retained by the Midland Bank, Ltd., of London.

He will argue a question of whether Massachusetts courts have jurisdiction in a suit brought by the United States Fidelity Corporation of Boston to recover the money involved.

Of this sum, which, it is claimed, was all deposited prior to Dec. 31, 1918, during the Russian revolution, the plaintiffs seek to recover $7,000 under assignment from the Moscow Merchants' Bank and $4,383 from the Mokuba, Ltd., of Irkich.

Judge Wilfred B. Gray will hear the pleas.

When the suit was filed, attachments were made of funds of the Midland Bank, Ltd., in the First National, National Shawmut and Atlantic National Banks of Boston, to the answer of the defendants the assignments are attacked as not having been made by authorized officials of the Moscow Merchants' Bank of Mokuba, Ltd. It was also contended that any amounts owing are based on contracts made in England for performance in England, and that the assignments were not made under the laws of Russia or would not be recognized in Russian law.

MISSING WIFE MAY BE VICTIM OF MANIAC

Rockport, Me., April 30—Fearful that his wife had been kidnaped and probably murdered by a maniac, Fred Wellman, town employe, today appealed to police for aid.

Mrs. Wellman disappeared from their Beach Hill rd. farm a week ago today, almost at the same time that a farmhand on a nerby farm disappeared.

Unfinished dinner and washing and the fact she left in a house dress, together with a sheriff's identification of the farmhand as an escaped inmate of the hospital for criminal insane at Augusta, Me., led to the fears of Wellman, he told police.

A photograph of the farmhand was identified by Sheriff Frank Harding of Knox County as that of Alden Boulieu, convicted in 1914 for the murder of his sweetheart in Aroostook County.

Boulieu was sentenced to life imprisonment at Thomaston, and in 1925 was committed to the hospital at Augusta.

Four years later he escaped but was captured and returned to Thomaston in November, 1929.

He was recommitted to the hospital in February, 1930, and escaped again last October.

Wellman told police his wife knew the missing man but could furnish no more information to County Attorney Ensign Otis, Deputy Sheriff Ludwig or Leon Shepard, finger-print expert, who questioned him at length.

Mrs. Wellman is 27 years old, 5 ft. 2½ in. tall and weighs 213 pounds, her husband said. He added that a friend reported seeing her in Rockland the day after her disappearance, but questioning of the friend revealed that the latter wasn't sure.

CANTON SEIZED BY GEN. CHEN IN COUP

Shanghai, April 30 (INS)—The city of Canton was seized today in a bloodless coup by Gen. Chen-Chitang, a leader in the anti-Nanking government movement.

The revolt is an outcrop of political dissension caused by Nanking leaders forcing Hu Han-Min to resign the presidency of the legislative Yuan and detaining him as a virtual prisoner.

Chen Ming-Shu, appointed by Nanking as governor of Canton, fled to avoid arrest. It was reported here that the radical leader, Wang Ching-Wei, engineered the Canton coup from his refuge headquarters in Hongkong.

MEAT DEALERS ARE ALWAYS OFFERING SPECIAL BARGAINS

Cheap Cuts of Meat Can Be Made Delicious When Seasoned With Sugar

The housewife who takes a moment these days to look over the meat counter lavishly saves money. For there are generous cuts of beef and lamb which can be bought at surprisingly low prices.

In braising, or cooking these meats pot-roast style, sugar should be used as well as salt. These two ingredients combine ideally with the flavor of the meat. The same holds true in the seasoning of meat and vegetable stews, soups and vegetables cooked individually.

It is a good rule to have a sugar shaker within reach, or a small dish containing a mixture of sugar and salt. Salt by itself overcomes flatness. When a dash of sugar is added the natural flavor of the food is "brought out." Most foods are more delicious with sugar, The Sugar Institute.

FREIGHT CRASH HALTS TRAFFIC

Hundreds of commuters were delayed in reaching their places of employment today by derailment of 20 freight cars on a cross-over at Braintree on the New Haven Railroad. The derailment blocked both tracks of the main line to and from the South Shore for several hours.

The derailment occurred near Braintree depot 5:35 a. m., when a switcher was pulling cars over a cross-over.

Passengers were shifted to trains from Brockton on nearby tracks, but this occasioned considerable delay and inconvenience. Persons going to Hingham, Cohasset and other points along the South Shore also experienced delays in reaching their destination.

Two Held, One Freed in Attacks on Girls

Edward Burke, 18, of Plain st., South Braintree, one of two youths charged with attacking Harriett Shanly, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Shanly of South Braintree, was freed today in Quincy Court by Judge Avery. Merrill Williams, 18, of Grove st., South Braintree, was held in $20,000 for hearing June 8.

Alfred Marchant, formerly of Quincy and now of Whitinsville, was held in $10,000 on a charge of attacking a Quincy girl two months ago.

Charlestown Folk Want 'L' Removed

A large delegation of Charlestown residents appeared before the legislative committee on transportation today in favor of a bill empowering the city of Boston to borrow money with which to tear down the Boston Elevated structure in that district and replace it with a tunnel to Sullivan sq.

The bill was filed by Rep. Robert L. Lee, who told the committee the proposed tunnel would cost $6,000,000 and that the officials of the "El" would be glad to get rid of the elevated structure and pay rentals on a tunnel.

Portuguese in New Bedford in Split

New Bedford, April 30—An echo of the revolution raging in Funchal, Madeira, was heard here today as political factions in the Portuguese colony split over a protest to the Portuguese government against tactics employed in quelling the rebels.

Last night a group of antagonists of the established government in Portugual voted to protest. Tonight at the Madeirenes Club the anti-government group will attempt to raise funds for an organized protest, and it is reported an opposing faction will rise to band to oppose the action. Police will be assigned to the meeting.

Radio instruction

Like other professions radio rewards only those who excel. The poorly trained will never rise higher than the place in which they started. Others will climb step by step to positions of power in radio telephony broadcasting sound pictures aviation radio radio merchandising. And among these will be those who planned years in advance . . . studied, worked, stuck to it.

Footballs Stolen From High School

Salem, April 30—The Salem high school was entered last night, one of a series of many breaks in the past two months, and three footballs, valued at $25, were stolen. Entry was gained through a cellar window. Athletic equipment has been stolen in all the breaks, police say.

Why has the "tired business man" become tired of musical comedies and revues? The present season has witnessed many "flops" in girl-and-music shows. Read about it in the American Weekly section of the next Boston Sunday Advertiser.

"BRINGS OUT THE HIDDEN GOODNESS"

John Bonello, Chef of the Parker House in Boston, approved Gulden's because it gives delicious flavor without obvious taste.

When he used Gulden's Mustard in his famous recipe for Baked Beans, Bonello wrote us "Gulden's brings out a wonderful hidden goodness in food.

The delicate blend of mellow mustard seeds and spices that you find only in Gulden's penetrates the food while it cooks, giving new appeal to ordinary dishes.

WHAT A CAST!

WALLACE BEERY

LEWIS STONE
JOHN MACK BROWN
JEAN HARLOW
MARJORIE RAMBEAU

No wonder this powerful picture takes its place alongside of "The Big House" as a great entertainment. Written by the same author, Frances Marion; directed by the same director, George Hill; with its principal personality again Wallace Beery! There's a combination to make a truly outstanding screen play. And they've done it again in this throbbing, romantic drama of society's defiance of gangdom!

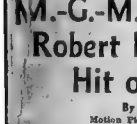
"THE CHRISTIAN," HALL CAINE'S NOVEL WE'LL BE REFILMED

M.-G.-M. Decides to Star Robert Montgomery in Hit of Long Ago

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
(Copyright, 1931, Universal Service, Inc.)

LOS ANGELES, April 30—Shades of dozens of famous actors. Hall Caine's famous novel, "The Christian," is to be refilmed. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has decided to make a talkie of this play which was made in the silent version many years ago with Earl Williams.

Unless I have made a mistake, it was refilmed some years later with Richard Dix. Scores of actors have played the well known character of John Storm, on the stage and on the screen. Perhaps it may seem a little old-fashioned now but when Metro - Goldwyn-Mayer bring it up to date and puts Robert Montgomery into the part.



Louella O. Parsons

Well, it ought to interest young people.

When we consider the money that "Ben Hur" has made we cannot say that any play is too old-fashioned to repeat so long as there is a story back of it.

• • •

A ROYAL welcome was given Marilyn Miller when she returned to Hollywood. All of her friends were at the station to meet her and to hear her plans for her movies. Her first picture is "Blondie," and, of course, there will be songs and dances. Marilyn Miller should sing and she should dance, even though musical comedies are not particularly popular. She makes three pictures for First National following "Blondie," the next two being "The Social Whirl" and "Miami."

• • •

IT MAY interest you to know that Pola Negri will not reach Hollywood for another week. She is sick in New York. But she will be here soon minus ten pounds which she has removed since she reached the U. S. A. Likewise, you may care to know that Elmer Rice has completed the screen adaptation of "Street Scene" and he leaves Monday for New York via boat. His new play, "The Left Bank," opens in the fall and all his friends hope it will enjoy the popularity of "Street Scene." Dorothy Mackaill returns to First National in a week to begin work on "Rival Wives" and everyone would like to know whether Dorothy is going to marry Mr. Miller or Walter Byron.

• • •

DEAR, DEAR, dear! I am always getting in wrong with someone. Louis Brock, at Radio Pictures, writes to tell me I am treating him like a stepchild. says Mr. Brock, "I imported Mr. Charles 'Chic' Sale to Hollywood for the purpose of making a series of two-reelers, of which one is already made. I gave him permission to do this part in 'The Star-Witness,' but nothing was said in your column of Chic's principal activity for the year, which is making six big pictures for 'yours truly.'" Well, here we are, mentioning it. We're also mentioning that Mr. Brock holds contracts with Rosco Ates and Ned Sparks and that he is making a series of individual star pictures in which W. C. Fields will appear, also Jimmy Savo, Ray Dooley and Gus Shy, likewise Clark and McCullough. What about Kolb and Dill?

• • •

THE ONLY actor I know who continues to act and direct without bringing trouble on himself is Lowell Sherman. Radio Pictures seems perfectly satisfied that Lowell can do both well. They have bought "The Divorce Lawyer," by Keene Thompson, for him and he will both face the camera and direct himself and his cast of the cast. Another director who has picked out a good story for himself is Mel Brown. He will direct Edna May Oliver in "Fanny Foley Herself."

• • •

IT'S A LONG time since we have heard of Roy D'Arcy. I has almost forgotten there was such a person. Remember, he used to be the arch villain with the expressive forefinger and the leer that was sure to express just how wicked he felt! He is coming back into the movies in a picture called "Ropes of Sand," produced by Miracle Pictures and directed by David Graham Fisher. You're right, it's an independent company and Sandra Belair plays opposite Mr. D'Arcy. The Lita Grey Chaplin-D'Arcy romance seems to be as dead as yesterday's newspaper.

• • •

ONE DAY Ruth Chatterton is carrying out her contract with Warner Brothers and the next day she is staying with Paramount. I am neutral. I printed her own story in the beginning in which she said she had no intention of not fulfilling her Warner contract and that she had selected her first story. Yet in a whole list given me of pictures to be made by First National there is not one mention of Ruth. "Exclusive" has been bought for Kay Francis, and William Powell will make "The Divorce Detective," by Florence Ryerson, as soon as he finishes "Co-Respondent."

• • •

WHO WOULDN'T CLOWN

Stunt Stars in "Dirigible"

In the movie studios, stunt men are highly respected and well paid. Their daring escapades add fascination to the pictures in which they appear. This is particularly apparent in "Dirigible," Columbia Pictures' epic of the air, which comes to the Majestic next week.

In this picture, the stunting actors fly a plane upside down, soom through the open door of a hangar and out again on the other side, make parachute leaps from a dirigible and indulge in other breath-taking stunts. All of these are authentic and bespeak nerve and an utter lack of "nerves," on the part of the performing artists.

There were no fatalities of stunt men in "Dirigible," although several men narrowly escaped with their lives when their calculations miscarried. One parachute jumper, who had calculated on landing on an expanse of ice, fell into the water and had to be rescued by his comrades.

Bowdoin Square

Another entertaining picture and vaudeville program is offered at the Bowdoin Square beginning today for the remainder of the week. John Gilbert in "A Gentleman's Fate" and Marion Davies in "A Bachelor Father" are the film features. Tomorrow night extra vaudeville holds forth in what is well termed "Bargain Night." The Silver Slipper Girls and Johnny Marrigan are favorites on the stage bill.

Gayety Acts Thrill Children in Hospital

Five vaudeville acts from the Gayety entertained the children at the Children's Hospital, through the courtesy of E. M. Loew. Among the entertainers were Jimmie Downing, who also acted as master of ceremonies; the DeVine Sisters, song and dance specialists, and the Barlelangs, comedy acrobats. Grover Burkhardt, manager of the Gayety, was also souvenirs to the children. Ida C. Smith, superintendent of the hospital, expressed her appreciation.

Circus Here, Bigger and Better

Once again the circus has come to Boston. The Big Show—Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey combined—opens its annual spring engagement in Boston Garden at the North Station this afternoon, coming direct from Madison Square Garden, New York city, where it has enjoyed phenomenal prosperity. "The Greatest Show on Earth" will exhibit here afternoon and night for nine days, closing on Saturday night, May 9.

Of course, the circus is bigger and better this year—it always is—but there are many innovations. Stirring new features headed by the Orland-Mara sensation in which Orland dives from a lofty pedestal with Mlle Mara on his back, onto a chute far below, landing on his chest with terrific impact, are all in America for the first time. The famous Reinach brothers, tumbling, somersaulting bareback riders also offer amazing breath-taking feats. They have just arrived from Germany.

Hugo, the human projectile, who is shot from a ten ton siege gun; the Reiffenach family of riders; Con Colleano, the forward somersaulting cabellero of the taut wire; the Wallendas, double high tight wire thrillers; Alfredo Codona, triple somersaulting aerial star; Lalicia Leers, girl mid-air gymnaste and Al Powell, aerial contortionist, are among the show's outstanding favorites. Goliath, the sea elephant, at least a ton heavier, will be present, as will 800 other spangleland performers of note.

"Crichton" at Colonial Monday

So far as the records show, there have been three separate local engagements of "The Admirable Crichton" which will be revived at the Colonial next Monday. It was first seen here the week of October 21, 1904, at the Hollis. William Gillette then played "Crichton", as he had in New York city. There were some changes from the original New York cast, however. W. F. Owen had succeeded Henry Kemble as Lord Loam; Jewel Bunker was playing "Tweeny" instead of Pattie Browne who, like Mr. Kemble, was the original in both the London and New York companies.

John Craig Players revived "Crichton" at the Castle Square in 1908 and the only other engagement recorded is that of the Henry Jewett Players at the Copley Square on December 11, 1916.

Exeter Theater

Fredric March in "Honor Among Lovers" and George O'Brien in "The Seas Beneath," are the attractions at the Exeter for the remainder of the week.

Carey Signed

HEART INTEREST

Notables of Screen in Cast

Famous players of the screen assume new cloaks and are appearing in aspects far different from those in which the public usually see them in "The Secret Six," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's sensational drama of city politics and the underworld, which comes tomorrow to Loew's State.

The usually debonair Lewis Stone plays a broken-down lawyer, unkempt and threadbare, when the picture opens. The usually roughly clad Wallace Beery becomes a veritable fashion plate. John Mack Brown, romantic hero of historical drama, becomes a reporter, with close-cropped hair and a flippant manner, and Paul Hurst, usually a "menace" turns comedian.

Wallace Beery plays the principal role as gangster czar, and Stone appears as the suave lawyer who supplies the brains behind the underworld intrigue. Marjorie Rambeau is seen as a gangster moll." John Mack Brown plays a reporter.

BUSINESS MEN SEEK WAY TO STABILITY

Atlantic City, April 30 (AP)—Employment stabilization, the relation of instalment buying to business depression, retail sales tax and trade associations were among the subjects discussed before various groups at the annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States today.

M. B. Folsom, assistant treasurer of the Eastman Kodak Co., said a survey of 89 Rochester, N. Y., concerns, employing 45,000, revealed that production and employment had been materially stabilized by sealed forecasts, production scheduling, manufacturing for stock, standardization of products, diversification of products and intensifying sales efforts.

DEFENDS INSTALMENTS

Edwin C. Vogel, chairman of the executive committee of the Commercial Investment Trust Corporation, defended instalment buying. He said predictions that instalment credits would collapse in a period of depression and unemployment had proved unfounded.

B. Earl Puckett, president of Frederick Loser & Co. of New York, denounced the retail sales tax as an unjust form of taxation, the greatest burden of which would fall upon the small consumer.

Charles F. Abbot, executive director of the American Institute of Steel Construction, Inc., said trade associations are the voice of the industry they represent. He urged that trade organizations take the lead in bringing about industrial recovery.

HOW TO PLAN STABILITY

Paul I. Aldrich, editor of the National Provisioner, Chicago, said self-regulation of industry through trade organizations must be based upon a policy that considers the rights of the public and preserves competition.

Henry I. Harriman, New England power company official, said today the survival of the electric railway industry in the face of automobile competition testifies to its economic necessity. He said even with a high degree of prosperity and with a more general diffusion of wealth there would continue to be a large segment of the population which would not be able to afford luxurious transportation.

L. C. Reynolds, comptroller of the American Writing Paper Co., Inc., of Holyoke, Mass., said to stabilize unemployment was to stabilize business, adding that "the thing we should work for is inherent stability . . . rather than continually experimenting with the many cures for unemployment which are really only palliatives."

The belief that branch banking under national sponsorship would do much to decrease bank difficulties was advanced by Comptroller Pole of the currency.

400 DIED, 2000 HURT IN QUAKE IN ARMENIA

Erivan, Armenia, April 30 (AP)—Nearly 400 persons were killed and 2000 injured in the earthquake which rocked Armenia on Monday, according to preliminary estimates, and property damage probably will reach $1,000,000.

The shocks were felt generally throughout Armenia, but were most severe in the southwest near Nakhichevan, where the longest shock lasted about a minute and was followed by terrifying subterranean rumbling.

The flimsy native huts collapsed in a dozen villages, and at the little town of Sisian every house was destroyed. The villages of Geruzin and Megris also suffered heavily.

The orgs (secret police) have seized hundreds of tons of grain consigned to Baku, and relief committees organized in the neighboring Soviet republics are sending money and supplies to the points where they are needed most. The government at Moscow has sent 2,000,000 rubles

3 IN HUNT FOR ARCTIC FLIER

Reykjavik, Iceland, April 30 (AP)—The patrol boat Icelandic Odin left here today with an airplane and flier aboard bound for Greenland to look for Augustine Courtauld, young British explorer.

The boat is due to reach the ice barrier, 60 miles from Angmagssalik, Friday morning if weather holds good.

Word came from Bergen, Norway, that Capt. Aldin Ahrenberg, Swedish flier, who also is to join the search, was advised not to take off there until the weather improved. A third rescue expedition is being organized in England.

Missing Man's Fiancee and His Family Most Anxious

London, April 30 (AP)—Among those most anxious for Augustine Courtauld, son of a millionaire British artificial silk manufacturer, is the beautiful Molly Montgomery, who became engaged to Courtauld before he joined the British Arctic air route expedition last July, Air England is absorbed in the search.

Courtauld's parents returned from America yesterday, having kept in touch by wireless with relief plans. Courtauld's sister is engaged to Capt. Ralph Rayner, organizer of the relief expedition that is going to Courtauld's aid.

Sec. Wilbur in Radio Talk on Child Health

Washington, April 30—Ray Lyman Wilbur, Secretary of the Interior, who is the chairman of the White House conference on child welfare and protection, is to give a radio talk on the work of the conference and its importance to mothers and children on A. & P.'s program, "Our Daily Food," over two N. B. C. networks tomorrow morning at 8:45 and again at 9:45 a. m., daylight saving time.

Train Crashes Tree Which Fell on Track

Haverhill, April 30—The 4:10 train out of Haverhill roared around a bend near the Ward Hill station and crashed into a fallen tree which lay across the tracks and was nearly derailed.

Feel the difference; Hear the difference; TASTE the difference!

Like an oasis in the dusty desert of dried tobacco, the new Camel Humidor Pack brings you the delight of fine quality cigarettes in factory-fresh, mild condition.

Now, wherever you go, you can always be sure of getting a fresh, throat-easy cigarette when you demand Camels.

It's easy to tell the difference. Your sense of touch detects it as you roll a cigarette between your fingers. Dry tobacco is stiff and crumbly. Camels are full bodied and pliant.

Even your ear can tell the difference. For a dried-out cigarette crackles when you roll it.

But the real test is taste and taste is causing a great nation-wide switch of men and women alike to Camels in the scientific new Humidor Pack. As you draw in that fragrant, mild, cool smoke, redolent with the joy of choicest Turkish and mellow Domestic tobacco, only then do you realize the full importance of this new Humidor Pack.

For scorched or dried tobacco is brash and tasteless and its smoke is unkindly hot to the tongue and throat.

If you are already a Camel smoker you have noticed the improvement in this your favorite cigarette.

If you don't smoke Camels, try them for just one day to see how much you're missing. After you've known the mildness and delight of a really fresh cigarette, switch back if you can.

It is the mark of a considerate hostess, by means of the Humidor Pack, to "Serve a fresh cigarette." Buy Camels by the carton—this cigarette will remain fresh in your home and office.

Rarick Forces Jennifer to Cancel Her Dinner Plans

WILLARD FAVORS N. E. RAILROAD MERGER

Girl and Five Men, Seized in Raid, Grilled on Killing

John Rarick and Jenny in Fannie Hurst's great story, "Five and Ten," as portrayed in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer talking picture. Rarick is played by Richard Bennett and Jenny by Irene Rich.

What Has Happened So Far

John G. Rarick has made millions as a chain store operator. His wife, Jenny, shortly after their marriage, lost him $2500, all she had, when he was near failure, and out of this money he built riches. But Jenny resents his far-from-imposing appearance and no longer feels real love for him. She plans the social education of their children, Jennifer and Avery. The thought is always in her mind that without her $2500 Rarick would have achieved nothing. Her goading results in Rarick agreeing to go East and to buy a magnificent home, but, secretly he finds himself hating her. This is accentuated by his own temperamental inability to get close to his children. All their appeals to him are made through their mother. Rarick meets an odd genius, Dr. Felix Gerkes, an authority on art and gems, and installs him in his house. Jenny objects to his presence and a bitter scene follows, but Rarick insists that Gerkes remain. He sends a message to Jennifer to see him.

Now Go On with the Story

By Fannie Hurst

Whose Novels Have Given Her a Reputation as One of the Foremost of Modern

(This famous story has been made into a talking picture by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with Marion Davies in the leading role.)

The very modern young Jennifer, who wore her docked head like Jeanne d'Arc, and whose metallic frock clicked, slouched in on him, indolent legs.

Her smartness, even back in the St. Louis days when she had first begun to affect them, had always been a source of her father's deep admiration. Not her indubitable smartness in the worldly sense, but the brand of it that was educated in the intelligent bright dark eyes, set into a head that stood so erect and right between its slim shoulders. She could have been anything. Jennifer could have been; except the thing she was. And the thing she was without his being able to define the exact why, was anathema to her father.

On Guard

It was not that she carried her cocktails vulgarly, or said gross things with what passed for the new frankness. She was no more and no less than any girl of her generation. Of her mother's upbringing. If anything, a little more. She drank rather less, smoked not at all, and, in her own phraseology, had remained a virgin chiefly because she had never let curiosity get the better of her.

To Rarick this young woman of his flesh, his board, his keep, who stood there on the hearthrug before him, glittering in her gown of fake armor, was as strange as, if she had stepped full grown from the life-size silvered-and-chalcedony Zeus that stood on a credenza against the wall. Everything he felt about this illuminated edition of himself was imbedded in disapproval.

He despised what she had become, chiefly in terms of what she might have been.

"You sent for me, Father?" she said, the glance she guarded from ever meeting his sliding to the spot where his greying hair hung in the Napoleonic forelock down his brow, and diminishing unconcern by feeling very consciously along the rear edges of her shining curtain of coiffure.

"Dr. Felix Gerkes, of the National Museum and a scholar of considerable consequence, is going to make his home with us. I suppose you know that Jennifer?"

A Refusal

A sense of relief ran through Jennifer. Thank Heaven he had not got wind of the whole silly business of "Casanova, Be Careful."

"Tell him the fellow, Father, when it comes to science, who kept 'Stones of Venice' on the geology shelf of his library."

"Dr. Gerkes's scientific achievement is by no means all there is to him, Jennifer. I want you to cultivate him."

"I want you to have dinner with Dr. Gerkes and me tonight."

"That's impossible. I'm late as it is for early dance with the Delaney Smarts. Shibby calls tomorrow."

The name "Shibby Stuart" was no more anathema to him than a dozen others which were constantly on the lips of his wife and daughter. In fact, there were important reasons of diplomacy why there should be an entente cordiale with Delaney Stuart, president of an Eastern Federal Reserve bank with which the Rarick Chain, Inc., had enormous transactions. But the pictures of Shibby Stuart as he had once seen her lying sick-drunk on a couch in his house, during one of Jennifer's dinner dances, rose crazily before him.

"You will remain at home for dinner tonight. It may help you to remember you have a home."

"Don't be absurd, father," said Jennifer, and began pulling at the net edge of her handkerchief. Her rage, which she felt hitting in hot points against her eyeballs, was out of all proportion to the dilemma of being obliged to cancel her dinner with Shibby Stuart.

"It isn't often I make demands, Jennifer. I let weeks go by without so much as seeing you at the dinner table. This is one of the times I want you here."

"You should have given me warning."

"You should have had sufficient judgment to know there comes a time when a halt must be called, if you won't call it yourself. You haven't sat down to dinner in this house for three weeks or more."

"I Hate You"

"Why should I? Everything I do gets on your nerves. If I'm so much as called to the telephone, you humiliate me before a butler by refusing to let me answer it."

"I have known you to spend twenty minutes of a dinner hour at the telephone."

"If I say the mocos is made of green cheese, then I've said something off-color. Hell! why should I want to stay at home, Father?"

He reached out and hit a gong with a baton of lapislazuli, padded in velvet.

"Miss Jennifer, will join me at

IS CAPTURED AT GUNPOINT IN SOUTH END

Questioned in Connection With Murder of Kiley in Somerville Gasoline Station

A pretty 21-year-old girl living in East Sixth st., South Boston, and five men were to be questioned today in connection with the murder of James M. Kiley, Somerville gasoline station manager, shot to death weeks ago.

The girl and four of the men were arrested at gunpoint by a squad of police officers in charge of Sergt. Albert F. Madden, who raided a rooming house in Massachusetts ave., South End, early today.

The fifth man was arrested in his home in the West End after the others had been questioned.

After the group had been taken into custody, all as suspicious persons, a search of the room disclosed the presence of three loaded revolvers, police say.

According to Sergt. Madden, the arrests were made following a tip that a gang that had been staging holdups in Somerville and Cambridge could be found in the Massachusetts ave. rooming house.

The group was taken to police headquarters to be fingerprinted and photographed. They all gave Boston addresses.

Notified that the gang had been arrested, Chief Thomas Damery of the Somerville police sent two inspectors to Boston to question them.

POLICE CALLED IN CHURCH ROW

Calling of police to settle a row that broke out in St. Michael's Russian Orthodox Greek Catholic Church on Summer st., Lynn, last night, was revealed today.

Smashing a padlock affixed to the door by the pastor, Rev. Anthony Tkach, 17 members of the church entered and attempted to hold services, according to the police.

The pastor telephoned for police aid, but officers who went to the scene allowed the services to be held.

The row between Rev. Tkach and his flock dates back several months and a hearing is to be held before a master Monday on action launched by the church members to oust their pastor.

Last January Rev. Tkach sued the church corporation for $10,000 alleging breach of contract. In February the members asked that he be ousted but the court refused and marked the case up for trial on its docket.

A few days later the pastor broke a padlock to get into the church to hold services for his adherents while the recalcitrant members held their services in the basement.

WOMAN FIGHTS EXTRADITION ON GEM THEFT

Mrs. Hurley, Arrested on Disgruntled Admirer's Tip, Pleads Not Guilty

Miss Jean L. Hurley, 54, whose arrest caused by an unidentified stranger, believed to be an aggrieved admirer, indicated in municipal court today that she would wage a fight against extradition to Florida.

She pleaded not guilty to a charge of being a fugitive from justice from Florida, where police say she is wanted for larceny of 19,000 worth of uncut diamonds, and was held in $10,000 bail for a hearing May 7.

Negotiations for her extradition will be taken up with Governor Ely within a day or two, according to the police, who are awaiting the arrival of officers from Clearwater, Fla.

Information that the woman was in Boston came Tuesday night, when Capt. Harry T. Grace received an anonymous call from a man who offered to arrange the capture.

Police refused to divulge the informer's name, but stated that he had freely admitted turning the woman over to the authorities for revenge.

The jewels which Miss Hurley is alleged to have stolen were the property of Mrs. Ella R. Curson, proprietress of a Clearwater, Fla., hotel. The theft occurred May 1, 1930.

SPRING COMING BACK AGAIN

Rising temperatures today followed an unusually cold night, when a low record of 40 years' standing was shattered at Lowell.

The new low record of 33 degrees was reported by the Locks & Canal Corporation, the previous low mark having been 34 established on April 30, 1901.

In the vicinity of Springfield a "hard-white frost" was reported by market gardeners, but asparagus was said to be the only garden truck which might possibly suffer. Ice a quarter-inch thick was reported in places.

While Boston's minimum was 38 at 5 a. m., the mercury began a slow upward rise shortly afterward and at 10 o'clock had reached 43.

Fair and warmer weather is predicted for tomorrow, followed by rain Saturday, caused by a disturbance now centred over Memphis, Tenn., this morning.

PORT OF BOSTON BEST ON COAST, HE DECLARES

Baltimore & Ohio President Says Conservatism Holds Up Its Development

The shipping interests of New England would be better served from every standpoint by a consolidation of New England railroads than by their incorporation into trunk line systems, in the opinion of Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad.

President Willard testified this morning at a hearing before the legislative committee on transportation.

"Internal control of a consolidated system of New England railroads, without outside dominance, would insure New England shipping a sympathetic handling of its problems," said President Willard.

"Our railroad, among others, would like to deal with New England roads on a parity with the big trunk lines, which would be impossible if they became parties to an agreement with the trunk lines.

BLOCKED BY CONSERVATISM

"In the event the trunk lines gained control, New England would become the tail end of a gigantic railroad system which has at heart the interests of the port of New York rather than the port of Boston."

New England conservatism, the B. & O. executive declared, is the worst enemy of the development of Boston as the eastern seaboard's greatest shipping center.

"I know of no port better served by railroads and water transportation," he declared. "The port of Boston offers advantages which surpass any other on the eastern coast.

POINTS TO BIG SAVING

"Boston is one day nearer to Europe than New York. The harbor is capable of handling many times the present volume of shipping. The railroad service is adequate, and the water routes are daily more appreciative of the convenience of Boston as a terminal.

"Speaking as a native of Vermont, I can see only the results of ultra-conservative New England as a handicap to the development of Boston's shipping industry."

In previous testimony before the Interstate Commerce Commission, President Willard asserted, he had stated that the merger of New England roads into a local system would effect economies of $2,000,000 a year in operation.

"Subsequent findings of the commission have borne out my statements," he said.

The carriage was struck with sufficient force to overturn it, but was not demolished.

CURLEY GREETS QUEEN OF MAY

Little nine-year-old Lydia Tagliuca, of Hanover st., who is to be Queen of the May at the festival on Boston Common tomorrow, was hailed today as the most gorgeous Queen who has ever entered the portals of Boston by Mayor Curley.

The little girl called at City Hall to invite the mayor to attend the festival, in which 300 North End children are to participate, on the shores of the Frog Pond at 11 o'clock tomorrow.

The mayor bowed gallantly, kissed her hand, and said: "My dear, you are the most gorgeous queen who has ever entered the portals of Boston."

Then he donned a straw hat and posed for newspaper photographers, saying, as he did so, "Let us give this picture a real touch of Spring."

TAKEN IN HOME OF ENGINEER EMERSON

Tells Policeman He "Would Have Shot It Out With Him" if He Had Been Alone

An alleged two-gun burglar, 20 years old, operating by daylight, was captured at noon today in the home of Guy C. Emerson, engineering expert of the Boston Finance Commission, in Agassiz pk., Jamaica Plain.

He told police he was Joseph LePore of Coral ave., Winthrop.

"If you'd been alone, I would have shot it out with you," he told Patrolman James O'Malley, according to the latter's report to Capt. Herbert W. Goodwin of Station 13.

O'Malley, who made the capture, was accompanied by Patrolman James Durkin. Both went to the scene in response to a call from a neighbor who saw a man crawling in a cellar window.

Durkin went in by the front way and O'Malley by the rear. The youth is alleged to have come running down the rear stairs where O'Malley arrested him at gunpoint.

Search of the prisoner, police say, revealed two guns, one an automatic pistol and the other a revolver, both of .38 caliber. He also had 25 pennies, but no other money. Two old gloves, which police believe were used to avoid leaving finger-prints, were found in the house.

The bureau drawer on the second floor had been ransacked and there were other indications of a search for valuables, police said.

When the policemen telephoned for the station 13 van, all three drivers were on other duty, and Capt. Goodwin drove the patrol himself. LePore was charged with breaking and entering in the daytime and taken to headquarters for further questioning.

Felix Has Sam's Goat; Court May Butt In

FOOD BILL OVER HUNGRY NAN HAS CHELSEA'S ANGORA

Please pass the ash can! Here's Nan, Chelsea's goat-getting goat, enjoying her groceries at the expense of Felix Cataldo, her temporary owner. Final possession of the beast may be decided in court. Four months ago Felix rented Nan from Sam Christino of Revere. He hired the goat for two months, paying $8 for the animal's services. When the two months was up Felix says Sam announced he didn't want Nan any more and let Felix keep her. Felix did, feeding her daily, as all good goats have a right to be fed. Now Felix says Sam wants the fattened nanny back. Felix refuses to return the goat until Sam pays him back the $8. He claims Nan has devoured that much in food, exclusive of tin cans, old shoes and other tidbits he's willing to forget. Sam has declined to settle's Nan's board bill, and now the goat-getting deal may not be settled until some judge butts in and hands down a decision that would make Solomon look dumb. (Staff photo.)

Young and Old Hit Trail for Circus

Young and old and in-betweens hit the trail for Boston Garden today and the grand opening of the circus this afternoon.

The big show, Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey combined, will hold possession of the North Station sports arena until May 9. Vacations in many of the suburban schools swelled the attendance at the opening performance. The greatest show on earth" brings to Boston 1600 employes and performers, including 100 clowns, 700 horses and 43 elephants.

When does a goat cease being an asset and become a liability?

The Supreme court in the case of Christino vs. Cataldo, may decide the question.

Felix Cataldo of Louis st., Chelsea is in possession of a goat, a lady goat, or goatess, called Nan for short.

Cataldo says no such thing, that he hired the goat from Christino for two months at $3 and that Christino didn't want the goat back.

GOATS MUST EAT.

Four months have now passed and Cataldo has paid only two months' rent on the goat.

Christino now wants his goat Cataldo says he can't have the goat unless he pays for feeding her for the two months the goat wasn't under lease.

The feed for the goat, exclusive of tin cans, shoes and old shirts, would figure about $8 for two months. Therefore, to obtain his goat, Christino must give back to Cataldo the $8 which Cataldo paid Christino for two months' rent of the goat.

The goat, on the basis of Cataldo's claim, was an asset while under lease, but only a liability during the two months she was in his possession rent free.

LIKE OLD ARMY GAME.

Christino has been to the Chelsea police about the matter and the police have advised him to go to court. He points out that if he is required to pay Cataldo $8 for feeding the goat for the two months that Cataldo didn't pay him $8 for her hire, Cataldo will have had the goat four months for exactly nothing, which savors very much of the old army game.

Then, of course, there is wear and tear on the goat to be considered, but the space is limited.

TRAFFIC TIED UP BY BAKERY FIRE

Traffic in Marblehead was tied up for more than an hour this morning by a general alarm of fire which partially destroyed Mrs. Barlow's turnover factory, for 50 years a leading bakery here.

The fire originated in pans of hot grease and spread rapidly through the walls of the old building.

All fire apparatus in the city was called to the scene and a street car service was suspended as apparatus blocked the main carline.

FREED ROBBER AGAIN IN TOILS

George J. Kenney, 25, of Worcester, pardoned in November, 1930, after serving five years of a long term for robbery, was in custody again today after a police chase through Brighton. His arrest followed a fight with a companion on a roadside near Brighton.

Kenney, who promised Governor Allen at the time of his release from Concord Reformatory that he was "going straight," faces charges of drunkenness and theft of an automobile that was stolen in Worcester yesterday.

According to arresting officers, Kenney and his companion were quarreling at the side of the road when the officers approached.

Kenney's companion, seeing the officers approaching, jumped into the car and fled, but abandoned the car later. Kenney fled on foot, but was overtaken.

Kenney is being held for the Worcester police on the stolen car charge.

Sentenced in 1925 from Worcester after he was found guilty of robbing a storekeeper of $500 at gunpoint, Kenney was pardoned

'DRYS' ABSENT AS YOUNGER G. O. P. MEET

Anti-Saloon League, W. C. T. U. and Other Antis Fail to Appear at Session

"Drys" were conspicuous by their absence this afternoon when younger Republican leaders conferred in private in the headquarters of the Republican Club of Massachusetts in the Old South Building, in the hope of compromising party differences over Prohibition.

Of the dozen persons present when Maj. Judson Hannigan, president of the club, called the meeting to order, neither the Anti-Saloon League, the W. C. T. U. nor other "dry" organizations were represented, although invitations were sent to all.

Lieutenant-Governor William S. Youngman, a prominent prohibitionist, who was among those invited, was at the time entertaining business leaders from all parts of the State at a luncheon in the Parker House.

Maj. Hannigan appeared to be disappointed at the failure of many of those invited to attend, but he refused to make any statement, explaining that a formal statement of the results of the conference would be issued at the close of the session.

Among those attending were Chairman Amos L. Taylor of the Republican state committee; President Fred Allen of the Essex County Republican Club and former-Dist. Atty. S. Howard Donnell of Essex County, also representing that organization; Samuel Fine of the Young Men's Republican Club of Springfield; City Councillor Laurence Curtis and Mrs. Frank C. Scanlon, representing a woman's association opposed to Prohibition.

RIDE OUT GALE TO SAFETY

DOUGLAS GOODWIN OSCAR AMIRO

Douglas Goodwin and Oscar Amiro, members of the crew of the fishing schooner Wanderer, brought their craft safely through a night of terror by remaining at the wheel when a gale threatened to toss the ship on Sable Island. Huge seas crumbled part of the pilot house away, but they stuck at the wheel up to their waists in water. (Staff photo.)

Battered by a southeasterly gale which held her off Sable Island all Monday night, the schooner Wanderer docked today at Fish Pier with 70,000 pounds of fish from the Western Banks.

Capt. George Goodwin told of the schooner's all-night battle, and exhibited the wreckage of the pilot house which crumbled before the force of a sea which ran as high as the masthead.

Two men were necessary in the pilot house to hold the schooner in her course. The huge waves smashed the dories to kindling wood and swept the decks of all movable objects.

WIFE IS ACCUSED OF CRUELTY BY E. BOSTON MAN

Hearing in Middlesex Court Interrupted by Collapse of a Witness

The collapse of a woman witness, coupled with testimony of threats, caused a sudden halt in the public hearing of a divorce case in Middlesex Probate Court today, the trial being continued in the judge's lobby.

Edward R. Harrison of Havre st., East Boston, who is suing Marion Harrison for divorce on the ground of cruelty, was on the witness stand when the climax came.

He told Judge Leggat that he had received anonymous letters informing him his wife was unfaithful and when he showed these to her she admitted it. He also told of seeing a man around the house.

"This testimony seems to have more to do with something else than cruelty," said Judge Leggat.

"Well, I didn't want to make the other charges because of our two children," replied Harrison, continuing:

"I was threatened by this man and some of my witnesses also were threatened."

Judge Leggat asked him if he refrained from making an infidelity charge because of the children or because of the threats and Harrison said because of the children.

At that moment a woman waiting to testify slumped to the floor

BURNS SOUGHT POST FOR PAL

It was John J. Burns' visit to the State House to urge the appointment of John C. Johnstone, Boston attorney, to the superior court bench that caused Governor Ely to choose the Harvard professor for the vacancy, thus giving the Cambridge man the honor of being the youngest judge ever appointed in the State.

Burns went to the State House a few days ago as a member of a delegation interested in securing the appointment of Johnstone, in fact, it was the second appearance of Burns on behalf of his friend, Johnstone. A few weeks earlier, when Judge O'Connell of Worcester died, he had gone to the State House to ask for the appointment of Johnstone, who is prominently connected with the Boston College Law School.

Burns was the leading spokesman in the two delegations, and had no thought of seeking the place for himself, but so favorably did he impress the governor that, in true Myles Standish fashion, the governor finally sent for him and told him he wished to name him to the bench.

Richard D. Ely, son of the governor, is a student at Harvard Law School and it is pretty well understood that the governor's favorable impression of Prof. Burns was augmented by the boost which the younger Ely gave to his instructor.

Burns, 30, of Harvard Law School, the youngest judge to be appointed to the bench in many years. Prof. Burns' name was sent by Governor Ely to the Executive Council, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Judge John D. McLaughlin. (Staff photo.)

Smoke of Tar Tank Causes Traffic Jam

Dense, black smoke from a fire in a tank car of tar caused a traffic jam at the Everett-Charlestown line today and convinced residents that a fire was in progress.

The tar was in the yards of the Warren Pipe Co., Rippy st., Everett. Autoists were forced to move cautiously through the pall and for more than an hour were nearly halted in the thick smoke. The blaze was caused by a hot pipe undergoing a tar treatment, fire officials said.

NEW STATION PLAN CHANGED

The proposed police station to house the present Joy and Hanover st. stations will not be erected until next year and the $350,000 now available for that purpose will be used instead to construct a new station over the entrance to the East Boston Traffic tunnel between North and Hanover sts., Mayor Curley announced today.

This decision was arrived at following a conference between the Mayor, Police Commission Eugene C. Hultman, William J. Casey, superintendent of the city printing plant, and Col. Thomas F. Sullivan, chairman of the Boston transit commission.

Adjoining the new police station will be a building which will house the city printing department. A central heating plant will also be located in this structure.

The total cost of the buildings is estimated at $500,000.

Mayor Curley will send an order to the City Council Monday revoking the order for $350,00 for the construction of a station to house the Joy st. and Hanover st. stations and assigning that money for the tunnel police building.

GIFFORD URGES CANAL PIER

Expenditure of $250,000 by the State for a pier for steamers passing through Cape Cod Canal was urged by Congressman Charles L. Gifford at a hearing today before the legislative committee on house ways and means.

Under a bill drawn up by the committee on harbors and public land, the pier would be located at Bourne and the channel would be dredged.

Gifford said the pier is of a tremendous importance to south eastern Massachusetts. Government engineers, he said, have made a survey of the canal and have recommended an expenditure of from $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 there by the government.

A Thrilling Serial of Post-War Love, Romance and Intrigue

By FAITH BALDWIN

Lorry Goes on Visit to Mac

By FAITH BALDWIN,
Author of "The Office Wife," "Alimony" and Other Famous Serials.

LISTENING AND answering, Mary Lou became slowly aware of one of the unendurable things she had to cope with, which was her very real, very alive jealousy of the actual Delight. Whether she lived or not, whether or not she ever came back to complete Lorrimer's healing and mold his happiness, Mary Lou hated her, and feared her, and was sickeningly jealous of her.

"But he loves me!" she would tell herself foolishly, and with a futile effort to gain some comfort out of all this uncomfortable tangle. "But he loves me," she would repeat. And then would be forced to face the fact that, while he loved her, it was because he thought her—Delight.

Spring was coming to Westwood, veiling the bare trees in a pale and glamorous green, spring flowers blooming in the borders and there were great Russian violets, single heads of purple fragrance, in the hothouses. Mary Lou had graduated from the mild and maidenly into named "Flapper," for Lorrimer, despite her protests, had bought her a new saddle horse, all her own, a delicious velvet-nosed, large-eyed creature, with a coat of polished mahogany, named, for no good reason, Lady Bountiful. And he was teaching Mary Lou to jump, down in the big paddock.

He himself was going to a Connecticut training camp several times a week and flying, with a pilot he had known in the old days. He was, once again, a student flier, looking forward to the day when he would solo. He was finding great exhilaration in it, and genuine happiness.

"Everything's different," he told Mary Lou; "the ships an improvement, and I've forgotten more than I ever learned! But I can learn again," he determined.

On his flying days his mother—and Mary Lou as well—knew no peace until his car drove up to the door and honked its gay greeting to them both. He was driving a car again, another good sign. But neither woman gave him any sign of their fear and their loss of serenity while he was absent from them. He had to try his wings again. They had made up their minds to that. And —he was happy. That was all that mattered.

He'd been away from them for more than a day also, and spring, going up to the Adirondacks to see Mac and observe the full of splendid reports of that staunch little fellow's grit and good progress. For Mac was going to get well, regardless, if only to show his gratitude to the man who had given him such an incentive in life, again.

The English revue came to town and Larry was bus'er than a one-armed paper hanger. He rushed hither and yon and announced that he was certainly making good, having accomplished the feat of getting the revue in every paper in town for six consecutive days. And coming out to Westwood, in a blaze of self-glorification, he was so entranced with his success, and the further exciting fact that he had sold two full-length stories to "big time" magazines, that he rushed over to see Jenny, found her out in her kennels administering first-aid to a sick Chow pup, and proceeded to her then and there in an atmosphere of disinfectants and dog!

And possibly because he said firmly "No, will I take 'no' for an answer, I'm not foolin', woman!" Jenny accepted him.

They weren't, they said, after breaking the news to the unstartled Louise, and coming to Westwood House to further spread the tidings, they weren't, they repeated, getting married for a year or so yet; "although," said Jenny, "I don't see a rule believe in long engagements." And in that year Larry expected, or rather decided, to establish himself as a free lance writer, a novelist and a playwright. He thought, however, after a little chat with Mr. Wynne, that he'd manage to hang on to his newspaper job for a time, just in case editors didn't see things his way, every time! And then, at the end of that rosy, indefinite period, he and Jenny would be, oh, not in Greenwich Village, but maybe on Brokiyn Heights, in one of those conventional brownstone houses—"Converted to what?" asked Lorrimer, laughing—and Jenny would learn to type his manuscript, as become an author's wife!

"She'll be just as long on lots today and nothing tomorrow," announced Larry sternly. "Champagne for breakfast—"

"I hate champagne, darling," Jenny reminded him.

"Well, certified milk, then, and honey, and brown bread; and for tomorrow's dinner a duck roast. That's the life! Jov I won't," he said standing before the Westwood fireplace, and looking meaning, "for I won't live on your father's money. Not that he isn't a darned good scout, at that!" admitted Larry.

"How about Mother's? Mother was a Lee," said Jenny, with elfin grin. "Lee flour, you know. Self-rising."

"Nor on Mother's either!" answered Larry firmly.

Backache May Mean Trouble

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

EVER SINCE man first walked erect he has been subject to backaches. Backache may be caused by a variety of things, all of them related to our present mode of living.

The most common cause of this annoying complaint is injury of some sort. Most of these cases are seen in industries where the posture assumed at work produces a back strain. Occasionally backache may result from a heavy blow or fall in which the back is injured.

Dr. Copeland

Frequently backache is caused by an "arthritis" of the spine. By this is meant an inflammation of the joints of the spine. The localized condition is usually associated with arthritis elsewhere in the body.

In case the backache is due to arthritis, it is necessary to find the cause of the infection. This is usually found in the teeth, tonsils or sinuses, or is due to some other localized infection in the body.

Many cases of backache are due to constipation. Improper posture, faulty diet and overweight are other factors to be considered.

As a rule, the chief treatment of backache consists of rest in bed and the application of heat. If not due to an organic disorder, recovery is rather prompt. Strapping the back with adhesive plaster usually gives immediate relief.

Where pain is persistent and does not respond to any form of treatment you have tried, it is essential that you have your back X-rayed This is important, because as a result of a fall or blow injury may have been done to the bones.

Never neglect this condition. Cases of backache, when treated early, clear up rapidly. Neglected cases take more time to be cured. If too long neglected, the pain may go on for years.

What's in Fashion Today

By AMOS PARISH.

NEW YORK, April 30—Isn't it a fact that when you can't think what else to wear, on goes your print?

Of course that's what keeps printed dresses fashionable—this feeling every woman has that she can't get along without at least one somewhere in her wardrobe. (And usually many more than one.)

The prints fashionable for wear right now and in the summer are different from those you wore in late winter. Their backgrounds are lighter . . . whether they're for day or evening wear.

Suppose you're planning a print dress wardrobe for all day. You want each dress to look different, of course. How are you going to do it when they're all of print? Easy!

Daytime Designs Small

First you'll probably do as most fashionable women are doing—choose a flat crepe with a small rather bright colored design on a fairly light ground for your general street wear dress.

Your dress is fashionable made entirely of the print. But it's newer if the print is combined with plain material.

Maybe just the yoke of the dress will be printed—or the entire bodice section — while the skirt is plain color.

More often than not these printed daytime dresses have their matching jackets. In a combination of plain and printed material, the jacket can be either one with equal sma...ness.

Formal Materials Sheer

For afternoon and evening the first difference comes in the material. You'll want a sheer one. Printed chiffon or georgette for afternoon. Printed chiffon for evening.

Their backgrounds will be even lighter than the daytime prints Light grays, off-whites and clear, pale pastels. Because of the sheerness of the material, the colors of the pattern will have a more blended effect. But usually you'll find one stronger color accent, like the center of a flower, that you can use to set the tone for your jewelry or handbag color.

Quite new for afternoon, when the dress is a simpler, more tailored type, are very tiny figures printed on either chiffon or georgette.

Sleeves or Sleeveless

This printed afternoon dress can have short sleeves or long. Sometimes they're sleeveless. But then the dress most always has a jacket. Because fashion is ladylike now and doesn't like uncovered shoulders in public in the daytime.

The sketch in the center shows one afternoon dress with capelet sleeves. The formal afternoon dress will be longer than the daytime dress—down to the lower calf.

Your printed evening dress, of course, is sleeveless. And it's ankle length. The flowers will be large and spotted at intervals over the light background. And if it has a jacket, as so many of them do, it can serve at informal events as well as formal ones.

Placing the Bread Plate

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:
Will you kindly settle the following disputes?

"A" claims that the bread and butter plate goes to the right of the table, and the knife. "B" says it goes to the left, over the fork.

Wear Your Hat—and Be Sure You're Right

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:
I was invited to a bridge and tea. The invitation was sent on a visiting card. There were three tables of bridge. Six of the girls took their hats on, and six, including the hostess, did not wear their hats.

The girls who did not wear their hats felt very uncomfortable, but did not know whether they were right or wrong. They just felt that way because the other girls, more "in society," wore their hats. Will you kindly solve this problem so that I can tell the girls? I was one who did not wear her hat, as I did not think that it was necessary in the girl's home for a bridge and tea.

HATLESS.

Usually, now, it is the custom for women to wear their hats at this kind of party, despite the informality. Indeed, very often the hostess also wears her hat, especially if the party is a luncheon and bridge. It is a bit safer now, if there is any doubt in your mind about this, to wear your hat. Then you know that you will be right.

'ROUND THE CLOCK WITH PRINT DRESSES

TEST OF COURAGE

Today's True Story

ELLEN AND PRESTON Crain were standing on the long pier when the girl in the red bathing suit threw her white arms in a wild gesture above the water and then sank from sight.

Ellen grabbed Preston's arm.

"Look," she said excitedly, "that girl's in trouble. She's drowning!"

The girl's voice came faintly to them. "Help, help," she called, and she again appeared above the surface.

In two bounds Preston was at the pier rail. His hands gripped the railing and for a moment he seemed about to somersault and go to the aid of the drowning girl. Then Ellen saw his face go white and his grip relaxed. He stepped back.

She couldn't understand. There was the girl drowning before them and—

"Aren't you going to help her?" she asked. "She'll drown if you don't, Preston, what is the matter with you? Are you afraid?"

"They're putting out a boat," he said. "They'll get to her in time. Look, here come the life guards now."

They did get to her in time. The lifeguard put out the boat, skimming over the water and, as they reached the spot where the girl had again gone down, one of them went overboard in a deep dive. When he reappeared the girl was in his arms. The others helped to drag her into the boat.

Ellen and Preston watched from the pier, but Ellen was not thinking of what her eyes saw. She was thinking bitter, burning thoughts—that the man beside her was a coward.

Girl Saved

"Let's go back," she said.

He walked silently; beside her as they made their way along the pier and back to the shore. By this time the life guards had revived the girl and, having wrapped her in blankets, were carrying her to a waiting automobile.

They reached the beach and mingled with the excited throng.

"I'll have to leave you now," said Ellen. "I—I have an engagement."

After that she avoided him. At such times as she was forced to recognize him she was distant and almost curt. Then he stopped seeking her company. The days and the nights weren't the same for Ellen. But she couldn't—she couldn't go about with a coward. She avoided others as she avoided him; she wanted to be alone. She was alone one day a week later when she swam out over the light background. And if it has a jacket, as so many of them do, it can serve at informal events as well as formal ones.

A thought came to her In an instant it was full grown in her mind. And then, just as that other girl had done, she suddenly threw up her arms, called wildly for help and then sank from sight.

She remained under until she thought her lungs would burst and then shot back to the surface, propelling herself with her kicking feet.

As she came up she felt an arm go about her shoulders. She looked It was Preston. His face was white and he seemed in pain. "Keep still," he panted. "Just keep still and I'll—"

His face grew white. A spasm of pain contorted it and then, without a struggle, he slipped beneath the water.

Feared Death

The life-guard boat reached them in time. Strong arms dragged them in; Preston unconscious and blue in the face. The next 15 minutes were a nightmare to Ellen. She hardly realized what was happening. She had only one thought—was Preston dead?

An hour later she was allowed to see him as he lay on a cot in the life guards' beach tent.

"You nearly drowned and it was my fault," she began. "I can't tell you how sorry I am. I wasn't drowning myself. I just wanted to find out if you—if you—" She stopped in confusion.

"I know," he answered. "You wanted to find out if I was a coward. Well, I am. I have to be. You see, I have a bad heart. Doctors have warned me. I can swim a little but I knew I could never stand the strain of going after that girl the other day. The life guards would just have had to rescue two instead of one. Like they did today."

He smiled and took her hand and Ellen smiled back at him. She was conscious of a great weight lifted from her heart.

"But you thought I was drowning," she said. "You went after me."

He understood the question in her statement.

"But that was you," he said. "You already had my heart. It isn't much, but—"

"Hush," said Ellen. "You mustn't talk now. But later—"

"Always?" he asked.

When Three Make a Crowd

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl of 19 years, in love with a nice man of 26. There is also another man of 24 who says he cares for me very much, but I like the other one best. I am home every other Sunday and would like to be alone with the first young man, but it seems that they both call together the Sunday I am off. I don't know just what to do, as I don't want to hurt the second young man's feelings Could you please give me some advice as to how I should go about this? B. E.

Dear B. E.—The only thing I can suggest in the difficult situation in which you find yourself is to write a note to the young man whom you like less well—the 24-year-old—and tell him you have an engagement for the next Sunday you expect to be home and will not be able to see him. You might agree to see him your next free Sunday—that will help break up his habit of calling every Sunday you happen to be home. But you've got to take the risk of his discovering that you received the other young man.

An Exchange of Cards

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Two years ago I sent a girl and took a great liking to her, but hesitated to show any sign. Last Christmas I ventured to send her a card, but she didn't acknowledge it. Now she has sent me an Easter card which has me puzzled. Should I send her a letter telling her I appreciated the card and thereby start a correspondence with her?

ANXIOUS.

Dear Anxious—It would be quite all right to send a little note and say you appreciate the card. It would be even better to send her a box of candy or some flowers—if you live in the same town.

Gems from the Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

WHEN putting cold cream or a massage on the complexion begin at the chin and work upward. The rotary motion should have upward, outward pressure. Won't do to pull down the tissues. When the cream is distributed slap with the flattened finger tips. Smooth lines crosswise, those that gully the forehead, those that furrow down between the eyes, also those that travel from lips ends to nostrils.

Women who weigh more than beauty laws allow should choose their dress styles with care. Frocks must not be tight; the tight toga reveals flesh instead of hiding it. Bouffant fabrics like taffetas and large figured materials are like extra pounds of fat, or inches added to the waist and hip measurement. Reducing is possible, with the aid to the health. The main requirement is will power.

Dryness of the hair is due to insufficient secretions from the sebaceous glands. There should be a hot oil treatment before the shampoo, and a small quantity of mineral or olive oil frictioned into the scalp afterwards. Vaseline will serve.

Chapped hands show that the epidermis needs oil. Almost any oil will do, as the oil standby, a combination of glycerine and rosewater, will do for mild cases. Not for bad ones; glycerine produces smarting. Creams containing lanolin are healing. Oil of sweet almonds is good. Cocoa-butter will serve. Thin, transparent hand lotions, made with a base of tragacanth, are convenient because they dry in good. Cocoa butter will serve.

Recipes of Round Table

SIX AWARDS of $1 each will be published each Saturday for the best contributions chosen from this column during the week. The household suggestions may include not only recipes, but any sort of helpful hints for housewives—economical cookery or housekeeping in any of its forms.

CHEESE CROQUETTES

1 cup thick white sauce
1 pkg. cheese, cubes
1 tbsp. grass pepper
2 cups bread crumbs
½ cup rice, cooked
1 egg, mixed with 2 tbsps. water
Shortening for deep frying.

Add cheese to hot white sauce and stir until melted. Mix with pepper and rice. Cool and shape. Roll in bread crumbs. Dip in egg and roll in bread crumbs again. Fry in deep fat (375 to 400 F.) until brown. Serve with sliced tomatoes. Serves six.—Mrs. Ann Campbell, 578 E. Fourth st., So. Boston.

The Garden Girl

THOSE INTERESTED in planning a rock garden, recall, I am sure, be greatly helped by the following suggestions from Miss E. M. S., of Fairmount st., Winchester:

"I have a rock garden 30x50, that slopes down on one side and where it is quite shady and moist I have wild ferns, Jack-in-the-pulpit, geranium, violets, lady's slipper, blood root.

"Then in the upper border where it is sunny, in the afternoon, Gold Dust, "Sweet William" ideal sedums, and among rocks wild honey suckle and horse-shoe vivicia, Queen Anne's lace and Jill - go - over-the-ground among the rocks and edge of walk. It belongs to the Nepta family but grows so fast and spreads so one has to weed it out occasionally so it won't cover something else. If one has not much money for a garden, this wild border is very effective, and requires very little attention once started, coming up itself each year as it does.

"Most of the beds are perennials or 'self-coming' annuals; but I use some annuals to fill in for blooms from spring to frost. Chrysanthemums and Iceblom will stand quite a few frosts and I don't think any garden would be complete without nasturtiums and Shirley Poppies.

"These I buy every year but many of my flowers I have exchanged with friends, rather than buy them, as I would rather say 'Aunt N. gave me those beautiful Anrstiana,' or 'that is a little Bleeding Heart I exchanged with a girl in Stoneham,' and 'those Japanese Iris my sister raised from seed,' etc., so mine is a sentiment garden. I have an old fashioned rose bush, a slip from my grandmother, that was a slip from her grandmother's, 'believe it or not!'"

Tasty Fish Dishes for Parties

By MARTHA LEE.

FISH ISN'T always the food the hostess thinks of when she is planning the refreshments for a party, unless it is during Lent or the lobster, salad, or crabs served in some delicious way, and it is not always either that she thinks of even then.

Yet fish may be made decidedly useful for a party as any other type of protein food, with as much eclat and fanfare as any hostess desires. Here are a couple interesting party recipes which are created with the two popular crustaceans lobster and crab, as principal actors.

CRAB CROQUETTES WITH TOMATO AND MUSHROOM SAUCE

Make a thick white sauce of 4 tbsps butter, 4 tbsps flour and 1 cup milk and season with 1 tbsp. lemon juice, 1 tsp. salt and paprika. Add 2 cups crabmeat and cool. Form into croquettes, roll in crumbs, dip in egg, and roll in crumbs and fry in deep fat. Makes 12 croquettes, serves 6.

TOMATO AND MUSHROOM SAUCE

LOBSTER SALAD EN GELEE

Dissolve 1 package lemon or lime gelatin in 1¾ cups boiling water, cool and let get thick as honey, add ½ cup mayonnaise, 1 cup shredded lobster, ½ cup diced cucumber, and ½ cup diced celery. LATE SELLING RAIDS TYPICAL BEAR TACTICS

By FRANK H. MELDON.

Staging selling raids in the last few minutes of trading as in recent sessions, makes up typical bear tactics. In the old days before the ticker tickers came into use this sort of raiding used to be extremely effective in unsettling the market. The tickers would keep around an hour or more overtime and the bulk of traders would be left almost completely in the dark as to prices, which led to their getting panicky.

* * *

* * *

Thomas B. Macaulay, president of Sun Life Assurance Co. of Canada, who started the financial world with his "hold common stocks" doctrine, uttered at a Swampscott convention, is "still in the ring." Definite announcement has just been made that Mr. Macaulay's company, largely interested in Boston issues, and manager of one of the world's largest investment funds, is not selling common stocks.

* * *

* * *

Fore River stood in fifth place among the 11 groups of the Bethlehem Steel Corp., which announced today the results of the first quarter of 1931 under its Accident "Prevention" contest. A bronze plaque is the trophy being competed for this year. It is awarded temporarily to the group making the best record for each quarter and permanently to the group that makes the best record for the year.

* * *

The old slogan in the South was "Buy a Bale of Cotton." Now it may be supplemented by "Sell a Bale of Cotton." The New Bridgeport Co. is using stationery made of Southern cotton with the slogan "Cotton for Good Security Only." The company announced it was to buy cotton with the proceeds of its gum sales in the South, resulting from the action of its Canadian subsidiary in buying Dominion wheat.

* * *

Meeting of Bethlehem Steel directors this afternoon closes the month. Earnings for first quarter and dividend action will be announced after 3 p. m. It was stated at the annual meeting that the preferred dividend requirements were covered, so it is estimated that net of between 3 and 75 cents a share will be shown. It seems probable the dividend will be reduced to a $1 basis. There is some talk of payment being omitted, but due to bonus fight such action at this time appears unlikely.

* * *

There are some automobile folk who believe the peak of sales will be reached in May this year rather than this month as happens normally. This is because the uptrend developed later than usual this year. However, it is too early to see what effect recent stock market happenings have had on automobile buying. Early estimates put General Motors net for the six months at $1.60 and there is some hope the dividend requirements will be covered.

* * *

Foster Wheeler is rumored to have shown deficit after dividends for the first three months. Westinghouse is reported to be still operating in the red. Kroger net is placed at 80 cents for the quarter and estimated at about 30 cents for April.

Nathan L. Amster, Boston and New York financier, chairman of Manhattan stockholders' protective committee, has issued a statement asserting that while the committee favors co-operation with the city in attempting to effect a transit unification plan, it is not committed to the $60 a share offer provided for in the Interborough plan. Mr. Amster adds, representing the committee, has agreed to ask the company stockholders to accept a fair price for their stock.

Erratic Trading in Bonds More Active

New York, April 30—Bonds wavered back and forth today in spotty but more active trading. German Agricultural Bank 6s of October, 1960, and Polish 7s dropped sharply. Bulgarian 7½s, Sao Paulo 8s and Uruguyan 6s made good gains.

SEES TRACTION NEED OF AID BY CITIES

Unrelenting declines in the aggregate number of passengers carried by the street railways of the United States continue, as in recent years, to be the principal problem of the traction industry, says the Standard Statistics Company of New York in a recent survey, which continues to state:

"The present low ebb of traction business arises from difficulties of a financial nature. These are, in brief: 1—steadily increasing use of the private passenger automobile; 2—congestion of thoroughfares which has slowed down the movement of all traffic, including street cars; 3—onerous, cumbersome and often inflexible regulatory measures; 4—increasing difficulties of various descriptions which have made exceedingly difficult the speedy adjustment of the fares to the actual cost of operation; 5—burdensome taxes, and 6—the existence of surpluses and a condition of financial stalemate which have made even small improvements difficult and have rendered large scale undertakings wellnigh impossible.

"Relief from these adverse conditions will probably be obtained only at the result of slow evolution, extending over a period of years. Steady gains year after year in the number of passengers carried by rapid transit facilities now operated in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and Boston afford concrete demonstration of the type of service necessary to recover a departing patronage.

"Built in all cases with city or state aid, the patronage in which facilities of this sort have been or are to be provided illustrates one logical method of solving the enormous financial problem involved in any subway construction.

"It is our strong conviction that the traction problems in other cities will be solved only through ultimate recognition by municipal governments that needful, efficient and speedy local transportation service is quite indispensable, and through substantial aid from this source, providing the necessary facilities.

"Little hope is now entertained for the industry as a whole, or the many companies now eking out a bare existence therein."

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

The market progressed today with few traces of yesterday's excited throwing overboard of stocks and other active industrials. Considerable rallying was displayed after a selling flurry in the first half-hour.

Biscuit, Telephone Are at New Lows

There was early weakness today in both American Telephone and National Biscuit, both of which set new 1931 lows before flirting. Investment trust selling has been held responsible for the poor showing of these shares lately.

Rails Have Rally, Led by Central

Railroads enjoyed a rally today with further short covering influenced by improved unloadings and other factors. New York Central quickly gained over 4 points in its leadership of the group and Illinois Central at the same time added 2 points.

Allied Chemical Shows Resistance

Steel's Action Brings a Rally

U. S. Steel's action in refusing to dip below yesterday's low was a main factor in bringing about the rally that started around noon.

Jersey Standard's Buying Is Good

Standard Oil of New Jersey in the last few days has been showing excellent resistance and on the floor it is stated recent buying has been from the best quarters.

Warnings Against Short Position

Observers are keeping customers on the side lines, but many warnings against adopting the short side are being issued, because of the view that the market could have a technical rally toward the end of the week, if the present liquidation is completed.

Favor Gillette Safety Razor

Judging from comments in various circles quite a few market interests are in favor of accumulation of, Gillette on all reactions from current levels. It is contended that considerable stock has been taken out of the Street as a result of the scale buying of the past two months. Much of this demand has been credited to New England interests who are more confident over the long-term outlook for the company than they have been in a long while.

Chicago Great Western Showing

Chicago Great Western made a good showing in the first quarter with operating income of $671,807 compared with $527,490 in 1930 and $773,516 in 1929. Because of this showing some firms have been getting a small amount of long-pull buying in the past few days, but three days in the 4 per cent bonds and the preferred stock.

Chesapeake & Ohio Net Earnings Up

Chesapeake & Ohio reported an increase in net operating income in March over a year ago. This is believed to reflect not only an improvement in traffic, but also a close control over operating expenses. Authorities on railroad conditions are confident that the road can cover $2.50 a share annual dividend needs by a comfortable margin this year.

Anaconda at 40 Per Cent Capacity

In copper trade quarters it is estimated that Anaconda at present is producing copper at the rate of 500,000,000 pounds a year, or at approximately 40 per cent of its capacity. It has been estimated that with a price of 9 cents for the red metal the company would show earnings of between $13,000,000 and $14,000,000 a year after bond interest and taxes, but before depreciation, etc.

BRISK RALLY IS REGISTERED IN WALL ST.

Numerous gains of $4 a share or more were registered. Auburn Auto staged one of its sensational performances as it skyrocketed around $30.

GAINS OF $3 TO $10

There were advances of $3 to $10 a share for pivotal leaders that for a long time have been bearing the brunt of persistent selling.

U. S. Steel regained over half its setback of yesterday.

A powerful influence was strong buying of the Standard Oil shares, which brokerage circles felt had its origin close to the Rockefeller interests. Wall Street recalled the spectacular Rockefeller bid for 2,000,000 shares of Standard of New Jersey which checked the decline in November, 1929.

Shares prices surged upward in the same violent manner in which they marked the climax of the selling movement in December, but not until after the bottom levels of that month had been gone and today yesterday, with the notable exception of utilities.

A slow rise most of the bears, started in the morning, became a stampede in the late dealings.

HANG-OVER SELLING.

The brisk buying brought out a little hangover selling in the last few minutes, and several issues closed a point off from the top. Kicked fell behind the feverish trading in the last half. Transactions aggregated 3,300,000 shares.

Issues gaining 5 or more included U. S. Steel, New York Central, Atchison, Consolidated Gas, Columbian Carbon, Air Reduction, Westinghouse, Du Pont, Eastman, Case and Allied Chemical.

Shares up 3 or 4 points included American Telephone, North American, Bethlehem Steel, Union Carbide and General Motors. Strong buying of Standard of N. J. in the early trading helped to start the ride. The issue gained about 2 points.

Directors of the New York Federal Reserve Bank today announced no change in the discount rate of 2 per cent. A possible cut to 1½ per cent had been rumored in Wall Street.

While the petroleum industry remains unsettled, with operations unprofitable for many, good grade latest Wall Street gossip has it that both Standards of New Jersey and New York will probably declare their regular dividends, although New Jersey may discontinue the extra.

Although Wall Street has grown rather skeptical over the theory that economic chaos must precede stimulating factor, many quarters would welcome it, as more than might strengthen the still discouraging bond market.

It Can't Be Done!! ↓ Babe May Be Down,
Squirrel on Ground. But He's Never Out!
Ruth Off Diamond. Fooled Us Aplenty.

BIT OF RESUME ON HIS HOSPITAL VISITS

YOU CAN'T keep a squirrel on the ground, nor Babe Ruth out of the baseball lineup. The old Five Horse, despite the accident here at Fenway Park that had the whole world talking, isn't going to remain in his stall much longer. It's dollars to doughnuts Babe will be bustin' the old eggie again within the next few days. The Bambino often has been down, but he isn't out, yet. Not by a long shot. If he isn't in the lineup tomorrow you are mighty likely to see him cavorting around the pasture at Yankee Stadium on Sunday. The only thing that'll keep him in the hospital long is a wooden fully-easy-to-look-at-nurse.

We've seen the old Babe carried off the field a couple of times before. That is why we refused to get hysterical over Ruth's accident. Let's see, it was on a spring training tour in 1919, down in Spartanburg, S. C., that dangerous germ noted for its mud and scrub cattle, we first heard seeing the Babe knocked here de combat, as they say in our best collegs. The Babe was then hearing 'em over and hammering 'em over and slugging flies for our Red Sox. The two clubs were managed by Ed Barrow, now secretary of the Yankees, Babe and Ed were in the same American League stable but in a different stall.

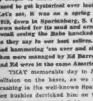
THAT memorable day in Spartanburg there was some kind of collision on the bases, as we recall it. Anyway, the Babe was seen crashing in the well-known Spartanburg mud for the count. Four Red Sox rookies dove-tailed him on their shoulders and carried him off the field.

BABE RUTH.

Spartan sentiment is unwavering. There you were on the Babe Ruth scene and whole columns were devoted in inflowering its populace that the mighty Slugger who alone has developed into the mightiest fielder of 'em all was out for a week or two. The more optimistic of the gang said that Babe might be back Slugging 'em by July 4.

The next day the Red Sox and the Giants, who were managed by Hugh Jennings, battled to a tie in Greenville. When the skirmish there were thirteen and there was an old Jennings figure prowling the bout in the post gratuse. His name was George Ruth.

The next year Babe broke into the accident headlines again in Cleveland. That was the Steamboat's first season with the Yanks. There he was a red-hot, three-cornered battle among Yanks, White Sox and Indians. In one of the knee-to-knee games with the Indians Babe's underpinnings buckled under him and they waved for the Red Cross corps. The stretcher bearers lugged the carcass off the field amid the sounds of a funeral dirge from its grass corp.



MR. RUTH.

THE COMMUNIQUES from the clubhouse stated that Babe was badly hurt. Club officials informed the scribes, who waited with bated breath, that Babe might get back in the game by September. It then was July.

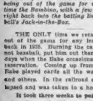
Two days later, if my memory is right, the mighty Bambino was back in harness and poled across a few runs.

Down in Dallas, Tex., and out in Chicago, Babe was carried off the field just as he was at Fenway Park and exclaims greeted almost his being out of the game for weeks. But each time the Bambino, with a few days rest, bobbed right back into the batting lineup. He is home Bill's Jacket-to-the-Bar.

THE ONLY time we recall the Babe being out of the game for any length of time was back in 1925. Burning the candle at both ends, not baseball, but otherwise. There were the days when the Babe occasionally strolled off the reservation, coming up from Florida. The Babe played early all the way to Asheville, N. C., with Steve O'Neill and others in the refined athletic of baseball. Then he was detained and was taken to a hospital.

BABE RUTHSKY

From there on he in the Babe back on his feet. When he did return it was for his poorest season. He hit under .300 and fell away just as badly on his home run average.



GEORGE H. RUTH.

As the Babe gets older the boom-boy getting livelier. Youth is always encouraged to the center. One of these days Babe is liable to get a smoked-up load and get his out of base ball for good. But until Fate captures the Bat Emperor and puts the light out, he is going to be kept on the ground.

Rob Sidenstadt, the Harvard sapsman, he hotts his agastic ability. One of Rob's attendors is supposed to be the first white man that ever crossed the Rocky Mountains. Two years were the days when Rocky Mountains were was a chickaree and Jack Quinn was in his wedding clothes.

HUGH BANCROFT is another Crimson product who needs no introduction. Hugh is the son of Dimitrious coming stuff. Lou Salonstall. Hugh's father and grandfather were also famous on Harvard nines. Mr. Bancroft, too, was known as the '97s, was Hugh's grandad.

Rowing runs in families. Consider the Ten Eycks and the Glendons. There was old Jim Ten Eyck, pioneer ace, and Jim Ten Eyck, winner of the Diamond Sculls and probably the greatest single sculler this game ever saw. Then there was both jobs of the family. His mother was the sister of Ned Moulon, another famous oarsman.

Sometimes eugenics don't work. Young Rob Pfizzimmons was the son of the great fighter Bob Fitzsimmons, a wonderful fighter and an beautiful and sweet a woman as she was a wife and mother. Young Rob never showed any great athletic ability.

WILBUR Johnny Vosmik, one of the baseball sensations of the year, got his big league tryout last fall but didn't set any words afire. Johnny only batted .251 in nine games. This year Johnny is accomplishing such wonders as batting in the field that Cleveland even is forgetting Tris Speaker.

Wesley Ines old Prince Carmora really is! Then he is the boxing contrib. When plushed for note her visitation in New York a fortnight ago Prince gave his age as 28 to the police. Prince was fined 10 bucks for packing his ire in an illegal zone. That's the second decision he has to this country. The first was to Jimmie Maloney, here in the Hub Garden.

There was a general shakeup in the race for Women's Golf Association of Massachusetts team match championship today and, when the dust had cleared away, the Southern District was back in first place again. Northern moved into a second place tie with Central, and Midland had pulled out in front of Western.

The Southern District took over possession of first place as a result of its 5-to-2 victory over Eastern at the Dedham Country and Polo Club and Central was defeated by Midland at the Commonwealth Country Club.

Entering the fifth matches today, Central and Southern were deadlocked for first place, but for the second time this season the wellbalanced, powerful Southern District took over the lead.

Northern moved out Western at the Salem Country Club and is now the only remaining undefeated team. Central, while Midland moved out of its tie with Western for second position by defeating the defending champions.

Mrs. Baker, Mrs. Quimby Have Won Five in Row

Mrs. E. M. Baker, jr., of Southern and Mrs. W. C. Quimby, of Northern, are now the only players who have won five consecutive matches in the series.

Miss Edith Stevens of Eastern and Mrs. Edgar Wells, who teams with Mrs. Quimby kept her shots clean to defeat Mrs. R. L. Hall and Mrs. Southern. Mrs. Hall, Pinehurst, Jr., Western and Mrs. D. A. Stillwell, Jr., Northern, halved their match, 3 and 2.

Mrs. Prunaret's record was spoiled by Miss Grace English who won 4 and 3 today, while Mrs. Baldwin Wood, Jr., Eastern, defeated Mrs. C. D. Woodfin, 4 and 3, at the Commonwealth Country Club.

NO HIT-NO RUN GAME BY FERRELL

Cleveland, April 30 (US)—Baseball's Hall of fame entered a new name on its roster of baseball immortals, when Wesley Ferrell, starting his third season in the majors and for the last two seasons star right-hander for the Cleveland Indians, hurled a no-hit, no-run game against the St. Louis Browns.

The final score read 9 to 0 and the young hurler, to add to his already tremendous fame, batted out a homer and a single in four trips to the plate. Two of the nine safeties in that memorable April 30 game were Brown players reached first and three others on walks.

The last one was pitched by Carl Hubbell of the New York Giants on May 8, 1929, when he beat Pittsburgh, 11 to 0.

PICK CAMP FOR STRIBLING

Atlanta, Ga., April 30 (NEA Service)—Georgia's favorite son, Young Stribling, will be started by W. L. "Young" Morgan, Atlanta boxing impresario, during the last week in May.

Stribling, who is training at Camp Lake Peck, near Cleveland, his home town, will be matched with Jimmy Maloney, Philadelphia Irish battler, early training immediately for the bout, which will be staged at the Atlanta baseball park.

Stribling, managed by Al Weill, remember Quincy City Council; Sheriff Harold E. Burns, Elks; former president Weymouth Chamber of Commerce, and Harold Pratt of Braintree.

Resort officials at Geneva Lake have announced that they have contracted the Stribings $10,000 to appear.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON.
Today's Greatest Thrill.

In the list of golfing thrills something like a sensational has been attained and you no longer are sensation of yesterday. In detail — often a thrill is a thrill, but in the principle of feeling always that "the baby done it" — there is no thrill like golf.

Golf is the only sport that immediately the entire golfing nation sips into your hands and makes you a hero. Golf is a lonely game, a game of concentration and this results in more smoothness of action, better timing—mostly better golf. The revelation comes to the golfer that he is the master and not golf, which does all the work, and of all the difficult points to engage in golf I would say that one is the most secure, yet very few golfers ever feel secure when they get on the right track toward it. "Do nothing with the body" is in a nutshell the secret of golf, and the golfer who succeeds even occasionally strike a single stroke toward it without having to restrain himself in some degree.

SENATORS OPEN SERIES WITH SOX TOMORROW

By JOE CASHMAN

Some Senators are popular.

There are more than a score of them in town now to play a three-game series with our Red Sox, who are held in high esteem everywhere.

They were scheduled to start the local engagement today, but cold weather prevented a game. So they will open upon the morrow and play a double-header on Saturday.

There are several reasons for the great popularity enjoyed by the Capital's big league entry.

First and foremost is Manager Walter Johnson, who, more than a quarter of a century "Big Barney" has been one of the finest, squarest and cleanest characters ever connected with the game and he is just as much an idol as a pilot as when he was the world's greatest pitcher and outstanding athletic hero. Everybody would like to see Johnson win a world's championship.

Altrock and Schacht to Put on Act

Then there are Nick Altrock and Al Schacht, those famed sportlss of fun and mimicry. Your fan likes a few laughs served up with his diamond dish and his appetite is always satisfied when he watches the Senators perform, for these two comedians are in a class by themselves when it comes to performing side-splitting antics.

And, last, but not least, there are the other members of the gang who comprise one of the classiest and snappiest of all major league outfits.

The Senators failed by a very narrow margin to win the flag last season. They fought the World Champion Philadelphia Athletics tooth and nail for the prize almost every inch of the way, despite the injury jinx, which robbed them at one time or another of the services of such important cogs as Heinie Manush, crack outfielder and leading hitter; Pitchers Fred Marberry and Al Liska, and Joe Judge, veteran first sacker.

This season they are all in good shape both mentally and physically. Providing the fan remains this way throughout the campaign, they are confident of finishing in front.

Senators Have no Fear of Champion A's

Though they have dropped four games in seven starts against Connie Mackmen to date this season, they don't fear the champions.

"We are ahead of the A's despite those setbacks and we will keep ahead of them," they predicted upon their arrival early today.

Manager Collins and his Red Sox refused to be drawn into that argument, but they did promise to give the visitors plenty of trouble during their three-day stay in town.

"Not having played since Sunday, all my pitchers are in good shape," said "Shano," "and I am looking forward to Russell coming gaining in the standing while the Senators are here.

"They beat us twice in Washington because our pitching was poor. We had good pitching in one game and won, 11 to 7. We ought to get good twirling and hope to be running all the way in the three games here.

Red Sox Hurlers Now in Good Shape

"Our attack has been better than the average since the season started. We are low in the standing because our flingers got off to a poor start.

"Most of them are now ready to show their best and if our hitting doesn't fall off, it won't be long before we start climbing."

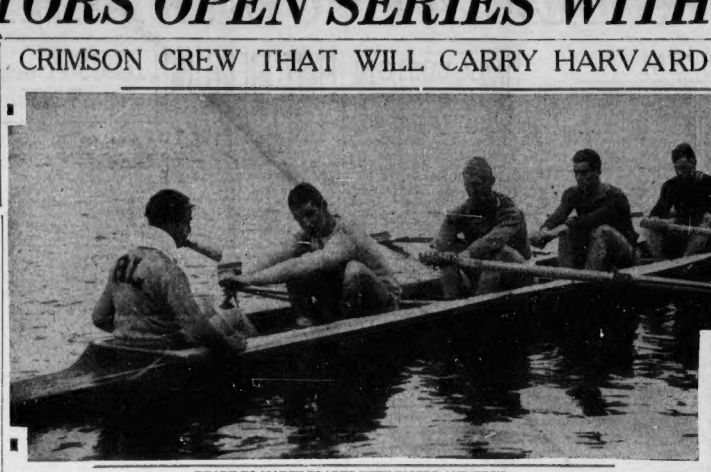
CRIMSON CREW THAT WILL CARRY HARVARD HOPES ON CHARLES



READY TO MATCH BLADES WITH TIGERS AND TECH

Here's the Harvard Varsity that will take the water against Princeton and M. I. T. on the Charles, on Saturday. Right to left are Bow, Holcolm; No. 2, Hallowell (captain); No. 3, Erickson; No. 4, Webster; No. 5, Bancroft; No. 6, Bacon; No. 7. Saltonstall; stroke, Cassidy; and coxswain, Holmes. Experts who have seen the Crimson crew in practice say Harvard has one of the best eights in years. Inset—Captain John Hallowell talking things over with Head Coach Charlie Whiteside.

TIGER CREWS WILL ARRIVE TOMORROW

When the Technology crews meet Harvard and Princeton on the Charles River next Saturday, Johnny Lawrence, stroke of the crack M. I. T. Jayvee boat, will not be working in his usual position. The Tech rowing ace has been stricken ill and is confined to the Homberg Infirmary.

His place will be taken by Lou Evans. Thisler will be taken from the bow position in the varsity boat and moved to that place in the Jayvee shell. Gil Ayres will take Thisler's place at the varsity bow.

Princeton's varsity, Jayvee, and freshman crews arrive in the Back Bay station tomorrow morning. They will hold their first workout on the Charles in the afternoon when their own shells arrive from New Jersey.

Coach Bill Haines is reticent about saying which crew he will choose to represent the Beaver varsity in the triangular meet on Saturday, and there is really so little difference between Jayvee and heavy boat that the final choice will largely be determined by the weather.

If the day is windy and the water choppy, the heavier oarsmen will surely get the call, but if the waters of the Charles are at all tranquil, it is quite likely that the Jayvee crew, which won so handily against the Navy last week, will be called to the boatings as the regular varsity.

No Racing for Harvard Crews Before Regatta

The time trials which Coach Whiteside planned for his Harvard varsity squad this week were cancelled yesterday afternoon on account of rough water on the Charles.

Coach Whiteside announced last night that he will not race his men before the opening regatta, with Princeton and M. I. T. on the Charles Saturday.

Tech Lacrosse Team Plays B. U. Today

Playing their third regularly-scheduled game of the season, Technology's varsity lacrosse team will meet the Boston University players on the Tech Field today.

To date the Beaver lacrosse men have lost their first two games, the first against Brown and the second against the Boston Lacrosse Club. Coach Sauerwein will attempt to get his team off on its initial win against the Terriers.

South Bend, Ind., April 30 (AP)—Jesse Harper tonight is to return to Notre Dame, which he left in 1918, to replace the late Knute Rockne as director of athletics.

Tomorrow he will take up the reins dashed by death from Rockne's hands.

Diamond Dust

By JOE CASHMAN

The bad weather, which has been trailing our Red Sox ever since last Saturday, finally caught up with the Braves to prevent their third game with the Phils and sent them hurrying to New York, where they open a three-game series with the Giants this afternoon.

Manager Bill McKechnie has no cause to shed any tears over the postponement. He can now use Old Tom Zachary, who was due to face the Quakers in the final, as well as Ed Brandt and Harry "Socks" Seibold, the other members of his "Big Three," against the McGrawmen.

The New Yorkers are going to see plenty of great pitching by this trio, judging from the showing of each in his last start. Zachary blanked the Robins, Brandt beat the same team easily and Seibold shut out the Phillies.

These three flingers are responsible for eight of the nine games which the Warriors have won to date and none of them has dropped a decision as yet.

Wes Ferrell, Cleveland's cocky but very efficient mound ace, entered baseball's hall of fame by pitching a no-hit, no-run game against the St. Louis Browns yesterday. He made good on his wish in flawless fashion, but he gave three bases on balls to kill his chances of turning in a no-reach game.

It was his fourth victory of the season and the first no-hit game pitched in the majors since May 5, 1926, when Carl Hubbell, Giant southpaw, hurled one against the Pirates.

Ferrell came up to the Indians from Terre Haute of the Three I League at the start of the '29 season and has been a sensation ever since. His first year up he turned in 21 victories and last season he came through with 25 wins.

The passing of Jim McAleer, former owner of the Red Sox, will be greatly mourned by all Boston fans, old enough to remember him. He was here way during 1913 and part of 1913, but in that short time he made a legion of friends and did plenty to boost the popularity of the game in this city.

He gave the Hub its first baseball thrill in eight years by producing a world's championship outfit during his first season here and in the middle of the '13 season he sold his holdings to the late Joe Lannin, one of the most popular prexies in the history of the game in this city.

McAleer was a type of owner that unfortunately is rare in the game today. He was a baseball man first, last and always. He was one of the greatest outfielders in the game in the early 90's, helped Ban Johnson to organize the American League and managed the Browns and Senators before his connection with the Sox.

The owners today with a few exceptions such as Bob Quinn, Clark Griffith, Charley Comiskey, Barney Dreyfus, Frank Navin and the Wrigleys, have no such baseball background.

There is one story that will always be told when McAleer is mentioned. During 1912 a fan was telling him what a great pitching staff the Red Sox had, meaning Joe Wood, Ray Collins, Charlie Hall, Buck O'Brien, etc.

"Yes," agreed Jim, "I have the greatest pitching staff in baseball—Speaker, Hooper and Lewis."

There is also another interesting story concerning him which throws much light on the conditions under which the game was played in the good old days.

The Cleveland club, of which he was a member at the time, was playing the Baltimore Orioles, who included in their lineup such hard-boiled performers as John McGraw, Hughie Jennings and Wilbert Robinson.

The umpire, as was occasionally the case in those times, failed to show up and it was agreed that one player of each team would do the officiating. McAleer was Cleveland's choice.

Cleveland went into the last inning one run ahead. The Orioles went to bat and their umpire, calling balls and strikes, gave the first three batters their base on balls though most of the Cleveland pitcher's deliveries were perfect strikes.

The "ump" was going to give his mates the game and there seemed no way of stopping him. But McAleer thought of one. He ran over and conversed with the pitcher. Then resumed his position.

The pitcher threw the ball to third, then to second and then to first, McAleer ruled that all three runners had been caught off base and Cleveland won the ball game.

NEW BEDFORD PICKED FOR CUP FINAL

The national amateur soccer cup committee has announced that the final game for the championship will be played at New Bedford May 10.

In previous years it has been the custom to send the Eastern teams to Pittsburgh or some other city for the final tilt.

New Bedford Black Cats, Eastern champions, will meet the Goodyears of Akron, O., in the titular battle at Battery Park.

WESTON RULED INELIGIBLE

Chicago, April 30 (AP)—Joseph Genewich, star New York Giant pitcher, and Johnny Gooch, veteran catcher for the Cincinnati Reds, today were placed on the ineligible list by Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis for failing to report for duty 10 days after the opening of the season.

Bush Awaits Return of Jolley and Lyons

Chicago, April 30 (AP)—Convinced that Tommy Thomas, veteran right-handed pitcher, has recovered his 1929 form, Manager Donie Bush of the White Sox is just waiting for the return of Ted Lyons and Lucas Jolley, to have his best lineup in the field.

After three weak starts this year, Thomas, who was almost worthless last season, yesterday shut out the Detroit Tigers, 2 to 0, and looked like his old self.

She waited until the door had closed again, and then, with her face set and her hands clenched at her sides, turned brown with little sounds as the quivers of her wrath shot through her, she lowered her face until it almost touched her father's.

"I just hate you sometimes," she said, and began to cry the inarticulate tears of anger and humiliation to which these scenes could reduce her. "I wish I had the nerve to go out and scrub floors for a prostitute, rather than put up with being treated like one here."

A fit of trembling that went through him like a tree-shake caught him at the words which came off her lips, which were so close to his face that it was as if he could feel their shape.

"You will have dinner at home tonight, Jennifer," he said, and looked at her with what, for a moment, threatening to disarm her, seemed like a film across his eyes. She sat down still pulling at the met edge of her handkerchief and every so often scraping it angrily along her wet cheeks.

"Well, now you've got me what is it you want with me? I suppose it isn't asking too much to be allowed leave of absence to get a message off to the Sinzers. God knows what I am to say."

He beat the song again.

"Telephone Mrs. Delancy Strart that, owing to an unavoidable change in her plans, Miss Jennifer will be unable to come to dinner tonight."

"Now what? I suppose I am to spend a jolly evening at home with the kinglings or blue grotes, or dinosaurs' eggs, or whatever it is one talks to fossil finders."

Cultivate Gerkes

"I want you to meet a great and simple person, Jennifer. A man who has not grown simply great in his work, but great simply

"Cultivate Dr. Gerkes, Jennifer. Cultivate Gerkes. You want to learn."

He knew he was being roiling and didactic and tiresome again, but to his surprise she flashed a tear-stained face at him that was all wide with a sudden curious clear-eyed curiosity to it that was reminiscent of the small brown fog of a child's face in Missouri.

"I do, father! I know I'm all of a piddle. I'm no to myself, don't you forget it. I want to sit at the feet of somebody and learn. God knows I don't know anybody with a pair of feet like that.

"Trot out his wise guy, father. I'll chuck everything and stay home at the indoor sport of improving my so-called mind. Do you think he'd like to collaborate with me on a book I've long had in mind, called 'Sex O'Clock'? Really, father, I am in favor of more and better brains."

JOHNSON AND M'ALEER FEUD STORY OUT

Youngstown, O., April 30 (AP)—The story of the famous break between James R. McAleer and Ban Johnson, pioneers of baseball, as McAleer saw it, was made public today as he wanted it—after his death.

McAleer told his side of the controversy to Frank B. Ward, sports editor of the Youngstown Vindicator, several years ago. "You can print this after I'm dead—not before," McAleer said.

The controversy, McAleer said, began in 1910 when he purchased a 51 per cent interest in the Boston Red Sox. Associated with him were Johnson and Mr. Irving, father-in-law of Garland "Chick" Stahl, manager of the Red Sox. Irving had been given a chance to buy an interest in the club because of previous financial aid he had given Johnson.

All Parties in Deal Are Now Dead

McAleer and Stahl, both aggressive, clashed throughout the year on club policies and matters finally came to a head when Stahl, according to McAleer's story, had Irving persuade Johnson to use his power as league president to force McAleer out of control.

Johnson, who McAleer claimed was under obligation to Irving, upheld Stahl's attitude and sent McAleer a message to that effect.

All of the parties to the dispute are dead. Stahl and Irving died some time ago, Ban Johnson a few weeks ago and McAleer yesterday.

Charles Comiskey of the Chicago White Sox often tried to bring Johnson and McAleer together, but failed. In spite of McAleer's resentment at Johnson, however, he defended the former American League president's ability as "the greatest head baseball ever had or ever will have.

CHAPTER 28
Dorson's Nemesis

AFTER A COUPLE of minutes of listening for any sound in that silent house, he crept across and entered the room, and, I admit with shame, sat for awhile and gloated upon the hideously distorted face of the first of Rosemary's murderers to receive his punishment.

And the wicked joy of my heart was increased appreciably by the thought that it was in punishment of that very crime—and not of one of the myriad others—of this enemy of mankind had met his fate.

It was over my diamond that they had quarreled, and that he had been murdered, and it was through him that the end of my diamond that Rosemary had died.

"Number One," I whispered, "Number One, you prophesied and kicked him with all my strength. I confess it with deep shame and contrition . . . But in those days I was not really a sane person.

And now for Number Two.

Picking up from my gloved hand, one of these, of which the back was blank, and taking a pencil from my pocket, I wrote in block capitals:

PERISH ALL WHO DOUBLE-CROSS CHICK OR CHINK.

SIGNED: CHINK DORSON."

The Halter

Surely this would put the British Scotland Yard in communication with the American police and would, in conjunction with Dorson's fingerprints and my anonymous letter that I would write to Scotland Yard, put the halter about Dorson's neck.

Meanwhile I must get secretly and safely away from the scene of crime, for, were I to be suspected on suspicion, I might be identified, and I well might, even though I proved my innocence of this crime, find myself extradited to America and returned to Atlanta, to the jail where I had escaped.

Departing swiftly and safely from the silent house, I walked up the private station, but only entered it when, in the distance, I saw an approaching train.

Then, and only then, after the means suggested to me by William in his latest letter, I made my way, at the proper hour, into the great park that surrounded the Monastery Nursing-Home, crossed its lawns and gardens nonchalantly and sat awhile on a seat in a shrubbery near the house.

At half-past one—after carefully studying William's sketch-plan—I crossed a wide lawn, apparently unseen by any, and stepped over the broad low window-sill of the open window of what I correctly supposed to be the kitchen-quarters.

It had been my intention, in the event of such success as I had achieved, to leave a note in an arm-chair, light a cigarette and recline at my ease until such time as Charters should enter his consulting-room.

I had seated myself in the deep and comfortable arm-chair which faced his desk, when, glancing idly round the beautiful old room, my eye fell upon, and promptly noted, the great heavy velvet curtains which hung on either side of the very window by which I had entered.

An impulse urged me to conceal myself behind the curtains, and study my man before he saw me.

Behind Curtain

Probably the idea was the result and product of my military training, and of the years spent in the atmosphere and environment of command. I did not much argue, as feel, that it would be a sound thing to do, probably giving me either advantage over my victim, or rather the man whom I hoped would be my victim.

Rising from my chair and straightening its cushions, I stepped behind the curtain that was nearest to the desk, settled myself as comfortably as I could, and draped the curtain in front of me.

I was comfortably ensconced, completely hidden, both from within and without, and perfectly safe, but could see nothing. This displeased me greatly, and by taking out my pocket-knife and cutting a small slit in a fold of the curtain, I made it hang toward me, when Charters was out of the room.

Yes, I reflected, undoubtedly my impulse had been a sound one. I, mi, hi, if I chose, hide in the house in a real sort of mystery would surround my discovery by me. Lucky I was by nature a being where I was, overhear, with benefit to my plans, conversation between Charters and Maude or Gryde; I might, by waiting, watching and listening, learn which of his female staff was "Prince Fanny and Louie the Lady, hated by Bill Dean to respectively, his own and his son's wife.

And at least I could choose my own dramatic moment of confronting him, and starting that reign of terror which I hoped to inaugurate.

According to his daily custom, exactly as Williams H. William had told me, the man Charters bustled into the room and set about his afternoon's work . . .

Nor was it long before I was listening, with breathless interest, and boiling indignation, to what was obviously a plot between him and the relatives of one of his patients, for the murder of that patient.

These two—the faces of both of whom I could, now, thanks to the cut in the curtain, clearly see—understood each other, and their conversation was a marvel of conclseness and compression.

Key to Cipher

When the woman scribbled something on a scrap of paper, and Charters, having glanced at it, crumpled it and threw it into the waste-paper basket, I knew that I had the key to whatever, otherwise cryptic, cipher it might contain.

(Late that night I recovered it and found that the woman had merely written upon it the figure one and four noughts. Ten thousand. The price of a girl's life, as I knew from what I'd heard. And it was then that I thanked the impulse, the Power—that had sent me, melodramatically stop-eating, if you will, behind my curtain.)

Later, when Charters was alone, I crept from his room, his eyes covered by his hand, I stepped silently from my hiding place and left by the window I'd entered.

To the hour of his death he must have believed that I had that moment stepped silently into the room from the hall.

This morning after my arrival at the Monastery, entering the dining-room to display myself to fellow-patients, and to make my choice as part of a breakfast responsible and eccentric to the point of lunacy, I came face to face—and even now I can scarcely write the word with untrembling hand—I came face to face, I say, with my daughter Rosemary . . .

Had I become insane indeed?

For the girl, sitting and smiling opposite to me, was Rosemary's self as Rosemary must have been had she lived.

Almost—and for the first time since Rosemary's death—I broke down and the horror of voices and lips and tears.

Rosemary . . . Rosemary . . .

State Owes Bank Depositors Restitution

The books, documents and evidences of the assets of the closed banks are found to be in a disordered condition.

He is alleged to have allowed this sorry mess to drift to the proportions of a common scandal without any effectual attempt on his part to correct it.

The heads of these two gentlemen are now demanded. Vaughan, if he is found, tried and convicted, will be fitted to prison clothes and interred in Charlestown. Guy will be displaced. A new Bank Commissioner will be found for his job and the public officials responsible for these results will strut themselves with unctuous righteousness.

But the taking of these two scalps, with aboriginal pleasure, should not be permitted to suffice.

These five banks were only a speck. They were small and, in relation to our banking structure as a whole, were utterly insignificant. But they were important to the little groups of people, mostly in very moderate circumstances, who have been waiting for the ultimate liquidation, hopeful they would receive something for every dollar they had deposited.

These people should not be made to suffer. They can derive little joy from the sight of the scalps hanging from the belts of superior public officials. They want their funds back, and they ought to have them.

This situation takes on more than the aspect of relations between private citizens and private bankers. Vaughan was nominated for his post as receiver by the Bank Commissioner, a public official, and was appointed to it by a judge of the courts, also a public official. He thus became himself a public official. No citizen of this State should be permitted to suffer the loss of a ten-cent piece as the result of the lapse from rectitude of any public official.

If Vaughan's bonds are insufficient to indemnify the losses, the Legislature should appropriate the balance and assign it to the accounts of the closed banks for distribution among the depositors. In this case the public honor is involved.

Cause for Rejoicing

Our New Airport

Boston and, in fact, New England, have cause for jubilation today.

Mayor Curley's plan to spend $1,250,000 for development of the East Boston airport has won the consent of the Legislature. That Governor Ely will approve the legislation is to be assumed beyond doubt. Soon the dirt will fly.

Mayor Curley has acquired Governor's Island from the national government. Now this fund will enable the island to be leveled, landing fields and hangars to be constructed and technical equipment to be installed. A fill will be made to the mainland and this combination with the existing airport will provide for Boston and New England the largest and most modern aviation field and center in the world.

There IS cause for rejoicing. Even if a discerning, far-sighted Mayor has to trek to the State House to beg ordinary rights for the city of Boston from a reluctant Legislature!

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Gigolo-Husbands

THE GIGOLO is no longer a creature of fiction. He has become a fact.

He has long existed in smart society, under other names—notably that of "tame cat." Twenty years ago, the society woman, with lots of superfluous time and money, always had a "tame cat" about—a harmless, personable young man, who gratified her devotion by her errands, filled in at her dinner parties, and "sang for his supper."

Modern husbands come in two varieties—providers and pets.

The Good Provider is a fur-buying animal, a cash-register and a producer of bacon, bonds, bungalows and automobiles. He is useful, but not necessarily decorative. He possesses all of the solid qualities, but few of the lighter graces. He doesn't NEED them. He is the Big Shot in the house.

The pet, or gigolo-husband, on the other hand, must earn his keep by the sweat of his brain, his tact and his dancing-foot. He must know a lot of parlor tricks, and respond to the touch of a button, like a pinto pony. He must be able to play golf, dance divinely, run any kind of car, mix a perfect cocktail, exercise the Peke, powder his wife's back, boost her game, and act as a background and foil for her charms.

He should cultivate a taste for poetry and chamber music, practice a flattering "line" and know just when to order flowers. All of which you will admit requires a special genius, artistic skill, and a lot of self-sacrifice.

A perfect gigolo-husband EARNS every penny that he receives. But, alas, how few men who marry for money or a soft-snap are willing to pay the price! How many of them lie down on the job and begin shortchanging and double-crossing the lady the moment she has signed on the dotted line.

Very few men possess the qualifications to be a house-pet. And, some men are neither providers nor pets. They are too lazy, too inefficient or too selfish to provide for any woman, and they would not WORK for the best woman alive. On the other hand, they have neither the talents nor the graces of a pet. They are too clumsy, too unwieldy, too phlegmatic or too self-indulgent to play gallant to her vanity and whims. They are not even good-natured or sweet-tempered, which is the primary requisite of a housepet.

Here and there, you will find a husband who is both a Good Provider and possessed of all the charms and accomplishments of a perfect pet—but the woman who draws one of these in the Big Lottery, never seems to know how lucky she is!

Words of the Wise Men

Lord teach my teacher that he may teach me. —Spurgeon.

It is in men, as in soil, where sometimes there is a vein of gold which the owner knows not of. —Swift.

Authority is by nothing so much strengthened and confirmed, as by custom; for one man easily distrusts the thing which he and all men have been always bred up to be. —Temple.

A beneficent person is like a fountain watering the earth and spreading fertility; it is therefore delightful and more honorable to give than receive. —Epicuria.

Listen, World! :: Self-Pity

By ELSIE ROBINSON

When You "Wish You Was Dead"

REMEMBER when you were about 13—

Elsie Robinson

And no one, in all the world, understood you —'n' everyone picked on you—

And you wisht you was dead?

Then all those old meanies would find you lying cold and still, with a sad, sweet, forgiving smile on your face . . . AND THEN MAYBE THEY'D BE SORRY, BUT IT WOULD BE TOO LATE!

Remember when you were 13 and felt like that? Remember also (bet you won't want to!) how many times you've felt like that since you were 13? For, though you're a big, grown-up girl or boy now—30 or 40 or 50 years old, instead of 13—it's dollars to doughnuts that you still have those wisht-I-was-dead spells. Not as often, perhaps—but when they do come, the symptoms are identical.

Things have been going on pretty well. You've been working hard—behaving yourself. But all the time, you've been accumulating a sort of rash inside your soul. Then one day, it gets too much for you—and you bust loose into a regular orgy of self-pity.

You're mad at everyone. You don't want to see anyone ever again. You won't do your regular chores. You refuse dates. You can't eat. There's only one thing that you wish to do . . . YOU WANT TO SIT DOWN AND BE SORRY FOR YOURSELF. So you do that. You stop trying to be polite or helpful or self-controlled and you abandon yourself to gobs 'n' gobs of gloom.

You think what a great, noble, generous, golden-hearted Human you are and how nobody appreciates you. You think of all the terrible things that have happened to you and all the dirt that's been done you. And how you—wonderful You!—never raised your hand against a living soul. But now that you've had enough! You're through! You're never going to trust anyone again. You're going away from everyone. Oh, yes, maybe your body will have to stick around at the same old address but it will be only an Empty Shell for your spirit will be far, far away!

THEN MAYBE THEY'LL MISS YOU!

Then maybe they'll realize what a Great Soul you were, what a Wonderful Worker—and they'll try to find somebody to take your place. But they won't be able to. Nobody's made who can take Your place. And they'll realize at last what they've done and be terribly sorry. BUT IT WILL BE TOO LATE!

And all the time—while you're thinking these things—what is really happening? Are your friends missing you? Is the world's work stopping because you have jumped your job? Is everyone convulsed with sorrow and remorse because you have removed yourself from circulation? No, gentle reader, they are not. No one's missing you. They are, indeed, secretly relieved that you've taken yourself and your grouch out of the picture. You're a Great Guy when you're regular and you know it. It's rolling on per usual. For, shocking as the fact may seem, there are thousands of people who can take your places.

That's the truth. And, when you come out of your tantrum, you'll acknowledge it . . . you'll see quite plainly that you've hurt only yourself. Then why do you throw these fits? You try to say it's because you were hurt, but you know that isn't the real reason. ACTUALLY, YOU INDULGE IN SELF-PITY BECAUSE YOU WANT MORE ATTENTION THAN YOU'RE GETTING. You're tired, maybe—or lonesome—or just plain ornery. You want to be coddled. You want people to flock around you and make a fuss about you and kiss your tears away. And they won't. So you make a fuss over yourself. And you get a Big Bang out of realizing that you're the world's worst sufferer.

WHY IS SELF - PITY? THAT'S WHY.

P. S. How do I know you act like that? Listen, stranger, I act that way myself!

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

Passing of the Horse and Gig

NEW YORK, April 30—When the old Waldorf gave up the ghost and the curb lines of drooping cabbies were forced to seek a new evening stands, the metropolitan press heaved a collective sigh for the passing of the horse and gig. They had gone the way of the bay-windowed brownstone fronts.

Only a small group huddled northward near the plaza entrance to Central Park. But their future seemed as shabby as the fading green of their liveried coats. Their cry, honeyed with unction: "Kerridge, sir!" had lost its appeal. The mad motor age exacted the final toll.

To those of us for whom the two-wheeled hansom cab with its driver perched high in the rear was a pleasant recollection, our passing was a sentimental wrench. Fifth avenue did not seem quite the same. To many they offered the only distinguishing difference between New York and any other city.

So it is nice to chronicle that for some reason—the market crash is as good as any—the hansom and the victoria have received a new spurt of popularity. As a means of leisurely metropolitan transportation the comeback is noticeable on all the smart thoroughfares.

The ancient drivers with empurpled noses and patent leather plug hats have taken new heart. Horses turned out to pasture are back in their stalls and curried to a new sleekness. Harness and other trappings are freshly oiled and red wheels spin among the limousines.

People are not only using barouches, hansoms and victorias for sentimental swings around the park and on Riverside Drive, but to and from the theater and opera. Debutantes pull up in front of restaurants in them. The hansom, by the way, was named for J. A. Hansom, English inventor.

When I came to New York it was the berries to sit on the verandah of the old Savoy at dinner or lunch and lazily gaze out on the passing panorama—the bobbing sun parasols, the clop of lacquered hooves, clinking silver chains. No one since has attained the imperious hauteur of those immobile grooms and footmen. Afterward one strolled southward and through the curtained window of the Vanderbilts, the Goulds, the Goelets and the Twombleys were glittering chandeliers sparkling in the crackle of open fires. As J. Brooks Atkinson says in one of his elegant essays: It was a vivid city. Things hummed.

Today the city does not hum. It splits the air with deafening crashes. As the leading stammer in a door-slamming family I find my efforts entirely futile. In fits of anger it is my wont to go through the house practising my art. But in all the noisy hub-hub it is completely lost. It is like dropping blotters on a pile of feathers.

In fact a piano tuner in the next room no longer befuddles. It used to be when he got hold of a note and tried to ping it into harmony I had to push away the typewriter and take the air. But today the Bounding McGuires can practise on my desk and work, such as it is, goes on as usual.

It is said Alexander Woolcott gave up dramatic reviewing because, after many years of it, he could no longer sit through a show. He has not lost a liking for the theater and attends regularly, but in a professional capacity he found it something else again.

Producers looking for harlequins to brighten a bleak world should catch the turns of Jack McLallen and Burns and Allen, somewhere in vaudeville. McLallen, with a dead panned "stooge" and a gorgeously voiced lady called Sarah, had Henry Sell and me doubled up like a pair of jack-knives. Miss Allen, with the urbane Mr. Burns prodding her on is a glorious stage dumbbell. And if someone doesn't star Phil Baker in his own play shortly I may sell my bond and do it myself. He has the most pronounced following of any single comedian. Deservedly, too.

Telegram from a certain syndicate: "For three days you have not been at your desk by noon day. What are you trying to do—be exclusive??"

KING PRAJADHIPOK of Siam has planned to see the Yankees play a game, as he is anxious to get a few helpful tips on royalty from the emperor of swat.

THE SPIRITED battle that is being waged over the relative merits of nightshirt and pajamas seems to be one political issue that George Norris's Progressive party didn't settle at the recent Washington conference. If the nightshirt wins this debate it'll be another significant straw pointing to the inevitable return of Mr. Coolidge in 1932.

For Hit-Run Victims

Goodwin Would Collect Damages

Frank A. Goodwin, chairman of the Boston Finance Commission, can usually be relied upon to furnish ideas which are novel, original and, in automobile regulation matters, leavened with sound common-sense.

The former Registrar of Motor Vehicles now suggests that the State should create a fund to indemnify the victims of those detestable cowards known as hit-and-run drivers, and of insurance dodgers' and of the others who operate their automobiles without legal sanction.

Drivers convicted of the serious offenses, such as operating while under the influence of liquor or so as to endanger life or property, would be assessed, say $25, in addition to the criminal penalties, and this assessment would be set apart in a fund by the State to compensate victims who have no other source of recovery for their injuries.

We hear much talk about "demerit" systems at this time. Goodwin would create an actual demerit system, the income of which would be derived not by insurance corporations but by hapless victims.

The people of this State assume that the compulsory automobile liability insurance law provides a definite guarantee of financial compensation for every person maimed or injured in automobile accident through no fault of his own.

Unfortunately, that is not the fact. There are, in fact, upwards of 40,000 cars in this commonwealth, regularly operated and regularly affording the possibility of damages, which are inadequately covered or not covered at all by insurance. These are the insurance dodgers of which Mr. Goodwin complains. And, obviously, a person injured by a hit-and-run driver who goes under the cover of night has no source of compensation to which he can turn.

The social theory of this compulsory insurance law was perfect. It was intended to indemnify any and all victims of automobile accidents. So long as it stays on the books, it ought to be made what it was intended to be and what it is supposed to be, but which it is not.

Grandma, 70, 'Steps Out'

By WINIFRED BLACK

And Grandpa Seeks Divorce

WHY, GRANDMA—the very idea!

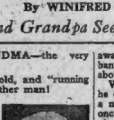
I read about you in the paper this morning, Grandma—I saw that your husband had sued you for divorce, and accused you of "stepping out" with someone designated as "the other man."

Tell me, Ma'am, if you didn't live so far away, Grandma, I'd like to come and see you—I would, indeed. I'd like to know how you look, and what you think of life, and how you act when you are yourself.



Winifred Black

You lived with him for 45 years, it appears, and now he's going to turn you out-of-doors to shift for yourself because you "run around" with other men.

Don't you ever have rheumatism, or fallen arches, or anything at all?

And where do you run to, may I ask. And who is the Gay Deceiver, who has been luring you away from your own lawful husband? I'd like to know some more about that Gay Deceiver.

Where did you ever meet him? Did he come to your house to sell you a new sewing machine, and all at once did your poor, tired old heart give a leap, and was it all over with your husband as far as you were concerned from that minute?

Or, maybe you just talked to the man on the doorstep, because your husband was "mad," and wouldn't speak, and you just had to talk to someone or die, and he is the sort of person who thinks a woman should never speak to any man at all but the tax collector and the funeral director, and then she should be discreet about it.

After walking together up and down the road, year in and year out, in the cold, and the rain, and the sunshine, and the dew.

Quarreling, making up, talking things over, starting again—why, what in the world are you going to do with yourselves the rest of the years, you two foolish old people? Go somewhere and live with strangers?

Spend your last days with people who never knew you, when you were young and light-hearted, and good to see.

Tut, tut—I hope the judge throws the case out of court—I do, indeed.

Star Dust and the Stars

By ARCHIBALD HENDERSON, Ph.D.

DUST IS an important factor in many phenomena, although this fact is not fully recognized. Wonderful effects in the sunset, for example, have been traced to clouds of volcanic dust, which float hundreds and sometimes thousands of miles from their eruptions.

The amount of dust which fills the air is scarcely realized by us until we see a ray of light passing through a dark room which illumines millions of dust particles, which become visible to the naked eye.

Scientists have recently advanced the plausible theory that the scale of the universe, as now formulated by many astronomers, is much too large. A star appears excessively remote; but it is, actually, much closer than it appears, on account of the absorption of light in passing through the cosmic dust.

Eddington has estimated that all space is filled with matter, with something to which we may give the name, for want of a better term, of ether.

The weight of the air filled with the gas is, nevertheless, appreciable; for one cubic light year of this gas weighs about one septillion tons, which would be represented by one followed by 24 ciphers.

Star dust sounds like some very fine, brilliant powder, suitable for scattering on a beautiful woman's dark hair. There are, however, various kinds of cosmic dust, and they are not illuminating, since light rays pass through them without "seeing" them, that is, causing a radiant effect.

For a long time it was believed that these were only "holes" in the sky. No stars or constellations were believed to be found in these regions. But it is now believed that these "holes" are really great clouds of cosmic dust. Such dust clouds completely blot out the heavenly lights behind them.
